Detective Hunts New Lindbergh Slaying Suspect

Paper Says He Handed Governor Hitherto Unknown Name.

Postcards Linked To Trenton Writer

Hoffman May Postpone Date for Execution of Hauptmann.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 6.—The Record tonight said Ellis Parker, Burlington County (N. J.) detective, has told Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey "the name of the man he believes kidnaped and murdered the Lindbergh baby."

"This man is being sought," the paper said. "His picture and description have been circulated secretly to officers over a wide area." The Record added:

"The man sought lived near Trenton at the time of the crime. Parker has connected him with postal cards received at the home of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh at Hopewell while the baby still was missing. A letter was sent to the chief of police of Trenton by the same writer.

"These postal cards and the letter, tossed aside by investigators with thousands of other communications regarded as from cranks, were seized upon by Parker."

May Delay Death.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 6.—A source close to Gov. Harold G. Hoffman today disclosed the Governor is determined to "see that justice is done" in the Lindbergh kidnap-slaying and will delay Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution if any "plausible" evidence is produced in the condemned man's favor.

The Governor said Ellis H. Parker, Burlington County detective, is working on the case and that Parker is "under the definite impression that Hauptmann is not the man."

Parker, who is 62 and has had a high percentage of successes in homecide cases, could not be reached today.

Gov. Hoffman visited Hauptmann in the death house of State Prison the night of October 17. He declined to discuss the details of the call and Hauptmann was silent today about the visit, his attorney, C. Lloyd Fisher, said.

Hauptmann's petition to the Supreme Court of the United States for a review of his Flemington trial is still pending. The court may reach a decision tomorrow and possibly decide Monday whether to review the case. Should the decision be unfavorable to Hauptmann, he still stands a good chance, in view of Hoffman's attitude and unforeseen developments, to escape the chair for some time.

Interest Developed.

The governor's interest in the case, it was pointed out, developed when after Hauptmann's conviction on February 13 last, hundreds of letters began reaching the state house, some declaring a belief in Hauptmann's guilt, others in his innocence.

The governor, it was disclosed, read many of the letters and made notes for his own study. Because of the widespread interest in the case he wished to be absolutely certain of Hauptmann's guilt before the Bronx carpenter walked to the electric chair, it was said.

Another angle interested the Governor, the source disclosed. He realized that few persons were interested in Hauptmann, that the agencies of the law, including the attorney general's office, the State police and Federal authorities, regarded the case as closed after the conviction, and that if an investigation was to be made of any leads received by him it would have to be done privately.

It has been estimated the investigation and trial cost $2,500,000. Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel at the trial, raised the point at Flemington that the defense was too poor to hire experts to pass on the ransom notes and the kindap ladder.

The interest of the Governor and Parker's independent investigation pleased Hauptmann's attorneys, but

Jan. 8 Speech By Roosevelt To Open Race

Farley Telephone Plea Spurs 'Jackson Day' Demonstration.

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt officially will open the Democratic Party's 1936 campaign January 8 with an address to be broadcast to Democrats at 1,500 simultaneous Jackson Day dinners throughout the country.

Announcement of the plan was made by Chairman James A. Farley, of the Democratic national committee, last night in an appeal to Young Democratic clubs of the Nation. The President, he said, will address a Jackson Day dinner here and his message will be broadcast to the meetings in every community of 5,000 of more population.

At the same time a bid for progressive support for President Roosevelt in the 1936 campaign, cutting across liberal opposition lines drawn by Senator William E. Borah, came from Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska.

Both moves indirectly stole thunder from the guns of the Idaho Progressive, who has hinted at G. O. P. candidacy on his own part. Norris, close personal friend of Borah, stated definitely he would campaign for Roosevelt, and it has been through the young folk element in the Republican Party that Borah has driven for G. O. P. liberalization.

Statement Guarded.

Postmaster General Farley made his appeal to Democratic young people through a 48-State telephone hook-up soliciting aid from State presidents of the Young Democrat clubs in organizing 1,500 Jackson Day dinners when the Democrats launch their national campaign. Incidentally, the national committee hopes to bolster its war chest by a rake-off on the price every diner pays.

Senator Norris, in his guardedly worded statement, said he will "not seek renomination" and will not be a candidate in the Nebraska congressional primaries. This was taken to mean he might still run as an independent in the November elections."

"I believe President Roosevelt deserves re-election and I expect to actively support him, regardless of party considerations," the Nebraska liberal added. "I can perform this duty more effectively if I am not the candidate for Senator of any political party."

Although nominally a Republican, Norris supported Roosevelt in 1932, as did the late Senator Bronson Cutting, and Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., who has since organized his own Progressive Party in Wisconsin. As LaFollette appeared likely to support Roosevelt again, Borah could look for certain backing only from one member of the once solid Progressive bloc—Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota. There has long been a rift between Borah and Senator Hiram Johnson, of California. Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, Farmer-Labor member of the bloc, has been noncommittal.

Had Wavered Long.

Norris long had wavered as to whether he would seek senatorial re-election, but there never has been any doubt in the minds of his friends that he would back Roosevelt again, even as against his Progressive colleague, Borah. When word circulated that the Nebraskan might retire from the Senate, President Roosevelt at a recent press conference said Nebraska voters should not permit him to do so.

Asked yesterday about a movement in Nebraska to place his name on the ballot anyway, Norris said he has received no information concerning it. Nor would he comment

Gov. Talmadge Calls for Split Of 'Solid South'

New Deal Critic to Hold Convention in Atlanta; Backed by Texan.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 6.—Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia today disclosed that the opening wedge in an effort to split the "solid South" against the Roosevelt regime will be driven next month at a Democratic convention similar to the Republican "grass roots" conference.

Gov. Talmadge, assailing the New Deal as "a combination of the worst elements of communism and socialism," announced a call will be issued within ten days for the convention.

The meeting, sponsored by the recently organized Southern committee to uphold the constitution, will be held in Atlanta.

"The growth of the committee has been rapid and widespread throughout 17 Southern and border States," he said. "The total membership now approaches 100,000 and active local units are being established as rapidly as possible in each of the several States."

Texan to Join in Call.

John Henry Kirby, of Houston, Tex., committee chairman, will issue the formal call jointly with Talmadge, the governor said.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, commented upon the proposal with the brief observation:

"Nobody is going to be very much concerned over what Gov. Talmadge does."

An announcement of the proposed convention was made by the Georgia Governor in an interview prior to an address in which he denounced the New Deal's spending program, labeled the social security law a "fraud," and called for payment of the soldiers' bonus out of the $4,800,000,000 works appropriation.

"Congress is going to vote to pay the soldiers' bonus in January, 1936," he declared, "and if it is vetoed, they are going to pass it over the President's veto.

Bonus Vs. Boondoggling

"The wise step for Congress to take is to pay up a debt by paying the bonus, and stop all of this boondoggling by paying the bonus over the President's veto out of that $4,880,000,000 security appropriation.

"Put two and one-half billion dollars into the hands of thousands of Americans in small amounts in every State and every county in this Nation, and let it be spent by private citizens in paying debts and improving their business.

"This will bring back more progress and more prosperity to America than ten billion dollars flitted

Britain Glad New Deal Is Being Tried Here, He Declares.

He paused, adjusted his silver-rimmed glasses and smiled—the Most Rev. and Right Honorable William Temple, D.D., D. Litt., Archbishop of York, was ready to be interviewed.

And the questions started even before he could draw up a chair. War and present chances for ultimate peace opened the discussion. To one of the first queries, His Grace replied:

"The League of Nations is doing what it can—but it will never do all it hopes to do until the United States becomes a member."

Cites Orient Crisis.

The Archbishop folded his hands. He faced a corps of newspapermen in the study of Bishop James E. Freeman's home on the Washington Cathedral grounds yesterday. Earlier in the day he left an English liner and came directly here by train from New York.

"Had the United States been a member of the League during the Sino-Japanese trouble," he continued, "the League itself could have taken immediate and more effective action.

"The present Italo-Ethiopian conflict has been—should I say—a showdown for the League. Of course, it is nearer home and by it, the League has been strengthened to a great extent. The future outcome will tell the story, however."

The current trouble between Italy and Ethiopia does not appear to interest the English people, Archbishop Temple declared.

"They are more interested in the Covenant of the League of Nations," he said.

Pressed for additional views on America's entrance in the League, his grace smiled again.

"The United States must remain with free hands until Europe has straightened out its difficulties," he asserted.

Admits "Policing."

He was frank to admit that the League has taken on the duties of "a European police force."

"And strictly European," he added, smiling.

He said the Italo-Ethiopian conflict "would probably end soon."

The subject was changed to America and his country's views on the New Deal. Asked what Eng-

Foreign Envoys Reminded Law Must BeObeyed

Hull Transmits Gov. Nice's Apology for Arrest of Persian Minister.

Secretary Hull yesterday mildly called the attention of foreign diplomatic representatives in the United States to the fact that they are expected to obey the laws of this country, even though they are immune from prosecution.

The Secretary of State made his statement in connection with the transmittal to Ghaffar Djalal, Iranian (Persian) Minister, of an apology from Gov. Nice, of Maryland, for the Minister's arrest at Elkton, Md., November 27.

Djalal was taken into custody for alleged violation of traffic regulations, brought to court handcuffed, but released when his identity was established. Nice told Hull that Constable Clayton Ellison and Town Officer Jacob Biddle had been tried on a charge of assault, paid a substantial sum, and discharged from their jobs.

There was conjecture about the "discharge" and "trial" of Ellison and Biddle. Ellison when reached by telephone last night said that neither he nor Biddle were "permitted" to say anything about the affair.

Apology Cited.

The Governor's apology stated that the pair had been tried and fined for assault, presumably upon the minister. Interested persons wondered how such a conviction could have been secured without the presence and testimony of the minister.

While the men themselves would say nothing, a worker in the sheriff's office at Elkton, said that they were leaving this morning for Hollywood, Calif., "on a couple of weeks vacation or trip."

Hull called attention to the fact that immunity of duly accredited diplomatic representatives and their staffs from arrest has been a law since 1790.

He added:

"It should be obvious that the unhampered conduct of official relations between countries and the avoidance of friction and misunderstanding which may lead to serious consequences are dependent in a large measure upon a strict observance of the law of nations regard-

Peace Terms Spurned By Italy, London Told; Battle Raging at Dolo

Women, Children Die in Bombings

Planes Batter Gondar, in Lake Tana District; Jijiga in Fear.

The War Situation.

Italian and Ethiopian forces were reported locked in battle on the northern front, with losses on both sides described as "huge."

Emperor Selassie sent a protest to Geneva after Italian air raid at Dessye, during which American hospital was bombed.

Italy was reported to have rejected the tentative Franco-British terms for settling the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 6.—Ethiopian troops are fighting a terrific battle with Italians 15 miles north of Dolo on the northern front, government advices said tonight.

Losses on both sides were described as "huge."

(The Exchange Telegraph Agency reported from Addis Ababa that 400 had been killed on each side.)

It is believed to be the mass engagement promised by Emperor Haile Selassie when he left for the front last week. The location of the battle indicates the Ethiopians are attempting to slice behind the Makale-Dolo fortified line to isolate the Italian outpost.

Word of the battle followed report of bombardment of Gondar and Dessye. Gondar, chief city of the Lake Tana district, which has been claimed for years as a British sphere of influence, was attacked for the second time in 24 hours. Four women and two children were killed.

Addis Ababa Next?

Dessye was bombarded at dawn in an attempt to kill Emperor Haile Selassie. Fifty-three persons were reported killed and 200 wounded. The King of Kings escaped unscathed. Italian planes scouted over Ankober, 90 miles from the capital. Many feared Addis Ababa would be visited next.

Reports from the northern front said the forces of Ras Ayaleu and Ras Imaru were bombed and machine-gunned by Italian planes.

Dispatches from Gondar said the bombs dropped were incendiary, like most of those hailed upon Dessye.

Government officials were indignant at the bombardment of civilians at Gondar and the Red Cross hospital at Dessye. After forwarding the Emperor's official protest to Geneva they asserted such action should result in prompt application of oil sanctions against Italy.

Planes Brought Down.

A message from the northern front said two Italian planes were brought down by machine-gun fire Tuesday when planes bombed the column of Ras Imaru near Makale.

Five planes dropped bombs on Mai Chankoua and Oustzera in the north and inflicted slight losses upon the troops of Ayaleu and Imaru.

Planes flew across Harar and Ankober this morning, but dropped no bombs. Jijiga and Harar generally aer expected to be bombed soon.

The Italians were reported attacking all along the Takazze River, sweeping the small bands of Ethiopian guerrilla warriors before them.

The Ethiopians were reported

Army and Navy Are 'Silenced' By Roosevelt

Step Follows Report Officials Held Church Body 'Aid to Communism.'

Because of purported statements of the Naval Intelligence Bureau that the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America was "aiding communism," the President last night was said to have instructed both the Army and Navy Departments to refrain from giving opinions upon the operations of civilian groups.

According to statements yesterday by members of the council, a protest was made to Mr. Roosevelt just before his departure for the South. Those who brought the matter to the President's attention were Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the council, and the Rev. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The President was represented as to have been "greatly chagrined" at the reported acts of the intelligence unit in placing the Federal Council among a list of organizations supposed to be giving "aid and comfort" to communism.

The delegation told the President, it was said, that this statement was propaganda for "big navies." Mr. Roosevelt also was reported as telling the council representatives that he had "no sympathy" with the attitude of the Naval Intelligence Bureau.

Council members said that before seeking an interview with Mr. Roosevelt, they had gone to the Navy Department with an initial protest. But by that time, they said, the damage had been done and the conference with the President was agreed upon.

It was said that the Naval Intelligence Bureau has listed a group of organizations aiding communism and the statement, member of the council said, caused deep resentment not only in their organization but in others, similarly mentioned.

Before leaving for Georgia, the President was said to have ordered both Army and Navy to refrain from expressing opinions concerning the operation of private organizations.

It was said the protest conference with the President was arranged by Dr. Sizoo, chairman of a committee of Army and Navy chaplains.

Hoare Will Seek United Anglo-French Front as Crisis Impends.

Oil Ban Is Favored To Answer Rebuff

Britain to Strengthen Naval Bases; Il Duce to Speak Today.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London, Dec. 6.—The British government was reported tonight to have received information that Premier Benito Mussolini has rejected the tentative Franco-British terms for settling the Italo-Ethiopian war.

The news is expected to change the character of British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare's conference at Paris tomorrow with French Premier Pierre Laval.

Instead of working with Laval to frame the proposals as an official offer, Sir Samuel is expected to devote his energies to cementing the Franco-British united front to face the increasingly acute situation.

He will attempt strongly to persuade Laval to co-operate in enforcement of a League oil blockade to answer Il Duce's rebuff.

Diplomats said all indications pointed to rigorous continuation of the East African war, strengthening of sanctions and a mounting danger in the Mediterranean, where Britain still has approximately 150 warships.

It was rumored Mussolini intends to reply to the oil embargo with severance of diplomatic relations with sanctionist states.

New Crisis Due.

Today's bombardment of Dessye and Gondar, reported refusal of the peace offer and imminence of oil sanctions—to be voted upon next Thursday—all are believed to foreshadow a new international crisis.

The report of Mussolini's refusal to conciliate, reportedly reached the British foreign office through French diplomatic channels.

Besides pressing diplomatic preparation to meet the new situation, Britain was said to be conducting secret parleys with a view of improving and expanding naval bases in the Mediterranean.

According to a reliable source, establishment of British naval facilities on the Yugoslavian coast—directly across the Adriatic from Italy—was discussed during the visit of Prince Paul, Yugoslavian regent, to London last month.

Britain is reported seeking a similar arrangement with Spain in the Balearic Islands.

The British are understood to intend assisting Greece to improve Greek harbors which British warships might use, such as Navarino, opposite the heel of the Italian boot. The tie between King George II of Greece and Britain—until recently his home of exile—is very close.

The British admiralty considers Malta too risky a base because it is only 60 miles from Sicily—half an hour's flight for Italy's Caproni bombers. The base temporarily has been shifted to Alexandria, Egypt, because the focal point in the Mediterranean situation is the Suez Canal. A large force also is understood to be stationed at Aden, at the other end of the canal and Red Sea.

Defiant Attitudwe.

Rome, Dec. 6 (AP).—Premier Mussolini, informed sources said tonight, probably will defy the League of Nations and the world anew when he addresses the opening session of Parliament tomorrow.

More forces were set in motion by Il Duce today. War-time measures strengthened Italy's resistance in an economic war, while the nation's sons fought a military one in Africa. Farmers pledged themselves to feed the nation.

Fascism remained obdurate despite the peace overtures voiced yesterday by Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, in an address to the House of Commons.

Hoare's speech, a government spokesman declared, "presented no new elements which can justify a change in the situation. It is known

Girl Donates Doll to Start Flow Of Gifts to The Post Toy Fund

First Day's Contributions Pour In as Drive for Christmas Cheer for Needy Children Opens; Three-Year-Old Sends Cash.

By last night, the cramped little headquarters of The Washington Post toy fund in The Post building was beginning to look like a miniature toy shop, as Washington's fortunate children hurried along contributions for the Christmas of less lucky boys and girls.

The first doll was contributed yesterday. It came from 7-year-old Sophie Finkensteadt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs E. R. Finkensteadt, of 3028 N street northwest, and it was blue-eyed and flaxen-haired, even as its donor.

This, it was hoped, would be the forerunner of hundreds of dolls by December 25, for, "A Doll," in capital letters, appears to be the first item in the appeal of every family worrying about the happiness of a little girl on Christmas morning.

That's understandable, said little Sophie, as she turned over her gift. She's a traveller. She's been in Germany and France, trekking over Europe. She's seen children in those lands, and there, too, the girls are mothering dolls. And she has a family of dolls for her own.

With one contribution of 25 cents yesterday came a letter from the contributor, saying:

"I am just a little boy, 3 years old, and I don't expect to get as many presents this year as usual, but just the same I know that Santa Claus won't forget me altogether, so I want to help some little boy or girl who won't have anything at all. I am sending some books and 25 cents for you to buy mittens or something for someone who needs them. If every little boy in and around Washington would help just a little bit, I am sure there would be enough toys to go around."

And from the other side came this note to The Post yesterday, from the mother of three children:

"Unless you can help us we will not have a good Christmas. Besides the three children, there are three grownups in this family, husband and wife and the aged mother of my husband.

"My children need shoes and blankets for the beds. They would like a doll or any kind of toys.

"May God bless you and yours on Christmas with health and happiness. The three little girls are nine, seven, and three."

Allen to Restore Relief Slash; Seeks $600,000 of Congress

Restoration, effective January 1, of the 25 per cent horizontal cut in December payments to District relief clients were ordered yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen, local works and relief administrator. These orders did not affect December payments.

Immediate appropriation of not less than $600,000 additional funds for relief here during the remainder of the current fiscal year will be asked of Congress when it convenes in January, Allen said.

Appropriation of $3,200,000 for relief during the next fiscal year will be sought. The 1937 estimates, now before the Federal Bureau of the Budget, call for $1,700,000 for relief. Congress appropriated $2,000,000 for the current year.

"Washington might just as well recognize now that it will have a tremendous relief load to carry for several years," the Commissioner said.

The personal aid of President Roosevelt will be sought, if necessary, to get from one source or another sufficient additional funds to meet the relief needs of the District, Allen said. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, have indicated they would be guided in relief matters largely by Allen. Should they be constrained by other things than relief, however, he will seek additional funds alone, Allen said.

"I may go to the President. I intend to go to Harry Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, and I will seek more money from Congress just as soon as it convenes. If the Budget Bureau refuses to increase the estimate for relief next year I

Clipper Ends First Mail Hop; Cuts Pacific Time Two Weeks

By the Associated Press.

Alameda, Calif., Dec. 6.—Flowers cut from Hawaiian gardens yesterday and letters written in Manila six days ago sailed into port today aboard the China Clipper.

The big flying boat completed her first round-trip air-mail flight to the Philippines by dropping in through a cloud bank seven hours ahead of schedule.

Her exotic cargo was whisked away in trucks to be rushed on eastward so the mayors of New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Omaha and Salt Lake City might have "Bird of Paradise" bouquets not more than 36 hours old on their desks tomorrow.

By steamship her Manila cargo would still be two weeks away from American shores and her Hawaiian consignments four days distant in the Pacific.

Seventeen hours one minute from Honolulu, 2,400 miles, and 63 hours 28 minutes from Manila, 8,000 miles, was the flying time. The landing was at 1:36 p. m. Eastern standard time.

Swept along by brisk tail winds, the silver-streamed sky liner reached a speed as high as 175 miles an hour in the overnight flight from Hawaii.

The average speed for the 16,000-mile trip to Manila and return was 2 miles a minute. Total flying time was 123 hours 15 minutes.

Forty-eight bags of mail, approximately 108,000 letters and an express cargo of photographs, motion-tion-picture films and flowers were carried back.

Cotton Institute Rejects U.S. Bid To Trade Talk

Business Must Give Jobs or Face New Taxes, Berry Warns.

The Cotton Textile Institute yesterday joined the growing list of large trade associations declining to attend the industrial conference called for next week by George L. Berry, co-ordinator for industrial co-operation.

Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, president of the institute and former head of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, replied to Berry's invitation.

"The Cotton Textile Institute believes in competition in industry," he said. "It also believes in rationalization of that competition by voluntary efforts to avoid cut-throat competition with its resultant disastrous effects on the public, employers and employes."

Murchison said that with this idea in mind, the industry observed its NRA code.

Opposes U. S. Action.

"The Supreme Court appears to hold that it is beyond the power of Congress itself to formulate and impose such measures on such an industry and to any Governmental action this industry has been and would be unalterably opposed," he continued.

"Under these circumstances, this industry is committed to voluntary efforts to rationalize its operations and its competition. These efforts it is making and will continue to make. The returning tide of business is assisting those efforts.

"This industry is opposed to turning aside from these constructive efforts in order to lean on the broken crutch of legislation. It regards it as idle and injurious to talk of legislation for control of the operation of competitive manufacturing and distributing and service industries at the approaching session of Congress. If any such legislation were desirable, it now appears to be impossible in view of the Supreme Court's decision on the NRA."

Need New Rulings.

Murchison added that in any event no sound legislative course could be chartered until the Supreme Court rules on the AAA, the Wagner act, the Guffey act and other legislation involving the regulatory powers of Congress.

"The session of Congress immediately preceding a national election is no time for cool, nonpartisan consideration of legislation affecting the conduct of industry," the letter continued. "Any such proposals would inevitably stir up recrimination, strife and uncertainty—and this at a time when with good feeling, unity and confidence, steady progress toward further recovery can be made. They would defeat the very purpose of the policy of the 'breathing spell,' which is already contributing significantly to such recovery."

The People's Lobby said yesterday it had received a letter from Dr. Walton H. Hamilton, director of the consumers' division of NRA, stating that he knew little about the Berry conference.

"I know almost as little as you do about Maj. Berry's conference," Hamilton was quoted as saying. "It seems to be very largely a meeting of industrialists and laborers to submit their own proposals and not a forum at which the issues are to be thrashed out."

Hight Tax Threatened.

The New Deal last night threatened American business with continuing high taxes and possibly increasing deficits unless business itself provides employment for the jobless.

"It's as simple as that," said Maj. George L. Berry, President Roosevelt's coordinator for industrial cooperation, carefully choosing his words in an interview. "The country's 11,000,000 unemployed must be fed and clothed. If industry will not do it by providing them work, then the Government must do it with relief appropriations.

"Business foots the bill in either event and there is no other answer."

Follows Business Talks.

Berry's remarks were particularly significant coming less than 24 hours after 1,500 of the most powerful and wealthiest business men in the Nation concluded a four-day session at which they pledged themselves to fight the New Deal in next year's elections.

Charging that employment is not even beginning to keep pace with this year's industrial pickup and deploring the action of some industrialists in lengthening working hours, Maj. Berry predicted that "unemployment will increase in staggering proportions" unless the trend is reversed.

"I am in hopes that industrial statesmanship will assert itself at Monday's conference," he said.

"According to the records, the improvement of business is out of balance with unemployment, which has been reduced only slightly.

"There is evidence of considerable breakdown in working hour regulations and there can be no doubt this means an accelerating of unemployment.

Fears Idle Increasing.

"If the tendency to increase hours is not curbed and that immediately, unemployment will increase in staggering proportions."

The reverse situation, with business doing its level best to provide jobs and increase purchasing power, he said, presents a rosy picture.

"This country has possibilities for a prosperity the equal of which we have never known," he added. "We have an educated market, the demands of which extend to every section of the United States.

"The banks are in possession of the greatest surplus in money that ever has been known. The Federal Government is emphasizing its confidence in the country by spending money to protect the unemployed.

"A more intimate and practical coordination of private business and the Government would be not only a good thing, but would act as a practical instrumentality to start truly genuine prosperity and stabilization in industry."

Gov. Talmadge Plans Revenge; Women Held Flying Handicap; President's 'Banker.'

By Raymond Clapper

GOV. TALMADGE of Georgia is preparing his revenge for the way in which he was humiliated by Administration forces during the big homecoming meeting for President Roosevelt at Atlanta a few days ago.

On that occasion the day opened with the hanging in effigy of Gov. Talmadge by unknown persons. Although the meeting was in the capital city of the State of which he was Governor, Talmadge was carefully excluded from any position of prominence on the day's program. He was assigned a seat in a section with some 1,500 others. Rather than go through with it, the Governor left town and went hunting.

Now he announces that he will stage a "grassroot" Southern meeting in Atlanta late next month. It will be held in cooperation with "The Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution," which is headed by the bitterly anti-Roosevelt Southern business man, John Henry Kirby, of Houston, Tex.

Talmadge and Kirby probably use more violent language in condemning Roosevelt than anyone else on the stump. They can be counted upon to make the Atlanta mass meeting the occasion of one of the most aggressive attacks the South ever has made on a Democratic President.

Talmadge is taking Huey Long's place as the most prominent heckler of Roosevelt. But whereas Huey was shooting largely from the left-hand side, with his share-the-wealth campaign, Talmadge shoots from the right-hand side. Most demagogues court the masses at the expense of Wall Street and the rich. Talmadge takes the same point of view, for instance, that Lew Douglas takes, but he dresses up those views with trimmings designed to appeal to mass audiences and he throws in a bit of circus stuff, such as his red suspenders.

If Talmadge's Atlanta meeting comes up to expectations, he may be expected to find himself in demand all over the circuit. One trouble with most of the American Liberty League leaders is that they are not good on the soap box. They are persuasive in the circles where no persuasion is needed. The groups that John W. Davis could sway are already against the Administration. But Talmadge can take their arguments and jazz them up so that the crowds out in the street will cheer. That is why he is capable of causing the Administration considerable trouble.

One prominent Government official has a theory that women are retarding aviation. Any number of husbands are compelled to promise their wives that they will not fly while away on business trips. This official says women, as the sheltered sex, always have been conservative in adopting new modes of travel. Whenever he speaks before women's clubs he tries to throw in a good word for air travel.

Department of Commerce aviation officials say that lack of funds is preventing them from introducing some of the latest safety precautions. The Department of Commerce operates the radio beam, but the present equipment is such that the radio beam must be interrupted to broadcast weather reports. A pilot, nearing a port in bad weather when it is vital to stick to the guiding radio beam, may suddenly find the beam signals suspended while he receives a weather report. With adequate funds, the department could set up separate communication systems so that the radio beam would suffer no interruption.

Senator McNary, of Oregon, has indicated he will reintroduce his regular farm bill, embodying the McNary-Haugen equalization fee, the export debenture and domestic allotment plan.

Republicans will not attempt to do anything with the farm issue until after the Supreme Court passes on AAA. The action of Republican Senate Leader McNary in preparing to introduce again his old three-way farm relief bill is of little significance. He has done it every year since Roosevelt came in. McNary doesn't believe the Republicans should make AAA a political issue. If the Supreme Court throws it out, then McNary's bill will be the basis for devising a Republican-sponsored substitute.

While in New York reporting the convention of the National Manufacturers Association for The Washington Post, Mr. Felix Bruner made inquiries to ascertain what "great bankers" might have told President Roosevelt in 1933 that a debt of 55 to 70 billion dollars could be safely carried by the United States.

The quest was fruitless until one banker said he had a theory of what had happened. He said probably the President had heard those figures from the liberal economist, Stuart Chase, and thought he was one of the Chases of the Chase National Bank.

Helsingfors, Finland, Dec. 6.—Eye-witnesses reported today that a Russian military airplane, flying over Finnish territory, was fired on by a machine gun and forced down in a marshland on the Russian side of the frontier.

The aviator was wounded, they said, and was carried away on a stretcher.

No official report of the incident was available.

Rescuers Seeking Lost U. S. Aviator

By the Associated Press.

Georgetown, British Guiana, Dec. 6.—An airplane rescue party seeking Paul Redfern, American aviator missing for eight years, had gone 500 miles into the South American jungle today.

A wireless message from Wanatoba, near the intersection of the frontiers of Brazil and British and Dutch Guinanas, said the searchers landed there from Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, in a large flying boat piloted by Art Williams, former United States Army aviator.

The party reported it was ready to begin a detailed search of 700 square miles of forest and swamp land.

Redfern disappeared in August, 1927, when he was making a flight from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio de Janeiro. There have been various reports that he was living among Indians in the interior of South America.

U. S. Agents to Examine Ady Ransom Letters

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Dec. 6.—Letters which threatened the life of Joseph W. Ady, jr., one-time millionaire mining man, were sent to the Department of Justice at Washington today for examination.

Ady, who disappeared from Colorado Springs three months ago, was found Wednesday at an old copper mine in the mountains 30 miles from Alamogordo, N. Mex. He refused to explain his disappearance. The letters, received by his wife, who now is on her way to Alamogordo, demanded $25,000 ransom under threat of poisoning him or leaving him to freeze to death in a mountain hide-out.

Atlantic Air Route Agreement Is Near

British and U. S. Interests Confer on Facilities.

By the Associated Press.

British and American interests were reported near agreement last night on plans for the mutual establishment of transatlantic mail and passenger service by air.

In contemplation was a co-operative arrangement between Pan-American Airways, already flying the Pacific, and Britain's Imperial Airays, private concerns, both to enter the field, with a reciprocal arrangement for the use of landing facilities.

Nearing the end of a deadlock that has stretched over several years, the delegates were talking of an agreement under which the American concern would be permitted to use Bermuda for a stopping and refueling point, in return for which the British company would be licensed to land in America.

With experimental flights still necessary to show the most practicable routes to be followed, there was discussion of an arrangement permitting both companies to land their planes in Newfoundland and Ireland. However, for the present the emphasis was on the southern route by Bermuda and the Azores.

Labor Concessions By Industry Seen

Sec. Perkins Expects Voluntary Aid for Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 6.—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins expressed confidence today that all American industrial leaders will see eye to eye eventually with Alfred P. Sloan. jr., in advocating labor concessions for which the New Deal has fought.

In an address here, she said the General Motors president proposed "a more economic balance of national income through policies affecting wages, hours, prices and profits."

"I think that means that the heads of industry really have learned something," she added.

"We can turn a screw and increase production, but we can't get a market that way. Increased wages and shorter hours wil provide the working class with buying power and industry with a market."

Manila Fight Opens On Military Training

Manila, Dec. 6 (AP).—Public hearings will open tomorrow on the Philippine national defense bill which would make military training compulsory.

The measure submitted by Quezon asked $8,000,000 including the regular $3,500,000 for the constabulary, and $1,700,000 immediately for equipment and construction. Quezon asked the Assembly to find new sources of income to finance the defense program.

Nation Showing Road to Peace, Roosevelt Says

U. S. Has 'Gone Beyond' Other Powers, He Writes to Bishop.

By Felix Bruner.

The United States has done its share toward restoration of peace in the world and in a number of respects has gone beyond the actions of other nations, President Roosevelt told an Albany, N. Y., bishop in a letter made public yesterday.

The letter, written November 14 to Bishop G. Ashton Oldham of the Episcopal diocese of Albany, and made public through the Associated Press, was looked upon as a reaffirmation and strengthening of the Administration's neutrality policy.

The message was disclosed as the Commerce Department was revealing that exports to Italy jumped in October, in spite of the ban on shipments to belligerents of munitions of war. The ban became effective October 5.

Even more significant were figures given out by the Bureau of Mines showing that crude oil shipments to Italy jumped from 62,000 barrels in September to 417,000 barrels in October. Oil is not included in the definition of munitions, but the Administration is attempting to discourage its shipment to warring countries.

The President's letter was not interpreted as indicating the United States is working in agreement with other nations in the present Italian-Ethiopian conflict. It was pointed out that he had indicated this country had gone even beyond the steps taken by other nations.

The letter was a reply to one written by Bishop Oldham in which he asked that this country "not let the world down" by standing aloof from international affairs.

"While shaping our Nation's policies to the purpose of banning the fire from its shores, I did not for a moment lose sight of the truth that the best guarantee against such a calamity would be the smothering of the fire itself," the President said.

The letter follows:

"My Dear Bishop Oldham:

"Permit me to tell you how deeply I appreciate your letter of October 31, 1935, and how completely I share your desire that America, as you express it, should not let the world down in the crisis now confronting it. I heartily subscribe to your statement 'that the only sure way for us to keep out of war is not to have war anywhere, just as the only assurance that your house will not go down in the conflagration is to take effective steps to prevent all fires.'

"The initiative taken by the United States on many occasions in promoting international peace efforts both before and after the World War were all predicated on the thought that world peace represents the only ultimate security against involvement in war.

"I need not detail to you the various steps this Government took prior to the outbreak of the war between Ethiopia and Italy, designed to bring to bear in the interest of peace the weight of this country's moral influence as a co-sponsor and signatory of the Pact of Paris. The failure of the world effort to preserve peace, however, placed before us a new situation. War had become a reality—the fire had broken out.

"Faced with this fact, it had become incumbent on me to give first thought to the unquestioned mandate of our people, expressed in recent legislation and in numerous other ways, through the press, through public gatherings and through petitions and letters, that, above all, the United States should not be drawn into the conflict. But while shaping our Nation's policies to the purpose of banning the fire from its shores, I did not for one moment lose sight of the truth that the best guarantee against such a calamity would be the smothering of the fire itself. Hence, the measures that the Government has successively adopted have served the twofold object of keeping us out of war and of confining and shortening hostilities.

"You state that the efforts of 52 nations may come to naught if the United States stands aloof. I submit that, far from standing aloof, we have, in the various steps we have taken to date, done our share toward the restoration of peace and, in a number of respects, have gone beyond the actions so far taken by other nations.

"You may rest assured that, in continuing closely to follow every development abroad. I shall have steadily before me that dual purpose I have attempted to set forth above. The support given me thus far in this difficult task by the public has been all but unanimous and has been most heartening to me.

"Sincerely yours,

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Follows Hull Warning.

Publication of the President's letter followed not only the numerous steps taken by the United States in relation to the Italian-Ethiopiau situation, but also the action of Secretary Hull in notifying Japan and the rest of the world that this Government does not look with equanimity upon the autonomy movement in North China.

Norris, who fathered the New Deal's TVA program, and likewise backed the President on the utility bill, is represented by his friends, however, as ready to run as an independent if Nebraska Republicans and Democrats nominate "standpatters." In that case, it was said he might not desire to serve out his full term, if re-elected.

In Farley's Jackson Day dinner appeal last night, a telephone hook-up was arranged with State presidents of Young Democratic Clubs of all 48 States. The Democratic national committee said the telephone hook-up was "the longest and most extensive ever set up in telephone history."

Calls the Roll.

Frank Wickhem, national president of the Young Democrats of America, took the phone first, to call the roll of State presidents, each answering "here." Then Wickhem introduced Farley.

The Postmaster General and national committee chairman said Jackson Day, January 8, has been selected for the opening of the Democratic national campaign. Farley called the demonstration a "reconsecration of our citizens to the ideals to which the Democratic Party is committed" and said participating Democrats would be giving "a hand not only in honoring the President, but in assisting the Democratic Party in the 1936 campaign."

He explained the monetary phase of the "assistance" this way:

"In order that every Jackson Day participant may feel that he or she is indeed being of material assistance to the Democratic Party, the price of your dinners should be worked out on a basis which will permit forwarding a part of what every diner pays to the Democratic national committee."

The "central and keynote" dinner in the January 8 demonstration will be held in Washington, with President Roosevelt, Cabinet heads, and other party figures in attendance. The President will broadcast a message to all of the clubs from the speakers' table at the Washington dinner.

Utilities Dispute Is Up to Courts, Says Roosevelt

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.,

A Staff Correspondent.

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 6.—A development of some importance in future Administration and political moves has come to light here within the last few days. It is an indication that President Roosevelt has softened his attitude toward the Supreme Court.

Expression of this changed attitude was given today when President Roosevelt, in reply to a question, asserted it was up to the courts to decide in the matter of those public utility companies which have failed to register with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the utility holding company act.

The President's attention was called to the failure of the large electric power corporations to register with the SEC before the deadline for such action expired on December 1 and the fact that many of these companies have brought injunction suits in the courts. Mr. Roosevelt was asked his opinion.

Has Strong Opinion.

There have been occasions in the past when such a question, propounded to him at a press conference, would have brought forth a sharp answer, most likely flaying the recalcitrant utilities. On perhaps no other issue does the President feel so strongly and has spoken out so bluntly as that of Federal regulation of the electric utilities.

Consequently he caused surprise when he smilingly replied that it was up to the courts to decide. Whether his reply meant that he was ready to accept the judicial decision on this question as final was not made clear, but, certainly, his answer indicated a far different attitude than that apparent at his famous press conference in which he commented at great length on the Supreme Court's invalidation of NRA.

There have been further indications, moreover, that the President does not feel as hostile to the Supreme Court as he did on that occasion last May. There is virtually no talk in Administration circles of amending the Constitution, either to limit the powers of the Supreme Court or to extend the Federal Government's power over social and economic conditions.

Plans New Steps.

Instead of proposing such a course of action if the Supreme Court declares the AAA processing taxes illegal, Administration figures are known to be at work seeking some way to get around any legal barriers raised by that tribunal. Thus it is doubted whether the constitutional amendment issue will be raised, even if the Supreme Court throws the AAA out bodily.

Incidentally the President declined any comment on the suggestion of Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, yesterday that if the processing taxes are invalidated, Congress might turn to a general manufacturers sales tax as a substitute. George made the suggestion after conferring with Mr. Roosevelt for more than an hour.

The President later in the day appointed the members of an investigation commission under the railroad retirement act to study retirement and annuities under that legislation. The commission will report to Congress before the act becomes fully effective, thus giving that body an opportunity to correct any impractical or unfair provisions.

Those appointed to the investigation commission were: Walter H. Pollack, of New York, chairman; Charles M. Hay, city counselor of St. Louis, vice chairman, and Dr. Frank J. Warn, of Washington, D. C.

Chase Osborn, former Governor of Michigan, now residing in Georgia, called on Mr. Roosevelt to urge construction of a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac. The President said that as soon as he returned to Washington he would ask Army engineers to make a survey of the proposition.

Mr. Roosevelt was out surveying with a group of engineers seeking a better scenic route for the old clay road over Pine Mountain at the time Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, critic of the New Deal, was speaking over the radio from New York in an announced reply to his Atlanta speech last week.

The President planned to start work tonight on the address he will deliver Monday before the American Farm Bureau Federation at Chicago. He also is preparing a talk to deliver before Notre Dame University that afternoon at a special convocation.

Bremen Convoyed After Bomb Story

Police Throng N. Y. Pier as Plot Is Reported.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 6.—Reports of a radical plot to bomb the North German liner Bremen led to the posting of an extraordinary police detail at the ship's pier today as she arrived under convoy of five Coast Guard cutters.

Thirty patrolmen, 25 detectives and 5 mounted officers guarded the pier as the liner began discharging her 624 passengers and cargo. The cargo included a large gold shipment.

The Coast Guard cutters had circled the vessel all night as she lay at quarantine. They were assigned to convoy duty after Capt. William Drechsel, marine superintendent of the line, reported receiving information that "some sort of bomb plot" was under way.

Mountain Town Loses Interest In Edith's Case

Maxwell Verdict Is Taken for Granted; Little Sympathy Shown.

By Virginia Lee Warren,
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., Dec. 6.—There never was much excitement in this little town, high in the Cumberland Mountains, over the verdict in the Edith Maxwell case.

Interset now in the 21-year-old school teacher, sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary for killing her father in self-defense, has reached its lowest ebb. No longer is the slender, dark-haired girl's fate discussed over beef stew and coffee in the two or three small cafes which dot the one business street of this county seat.

Resentment against "meddling outsiders" who are trying to help Edith in her fight for a new trial is still boiling. But the Maxwell girl, herself, locked in a cell at the old red-brick jail, is taken pretty much for granted. After all, she's been there since July.

Jail Antiquated.

Even if her lawyer had not prepared briefs, asking for a new trial, immediately after she was sentenced more than two weeks ago, Edith would still be in her basement cell here. Wise County does not transfer prisoners to the penitentiary until the circuit court has adjourned, when a batch of them can be taken at one time.

The young school teacher's attorneys declare they will carry their appeal "to the highest court in the land if necessary." Should she be denied a new trial, she would probably be better off in the penitentiary than where she is now. The jail here is antiquated and usually crowded.

Inhabitants of this little mountain community with mighty few exceptions are still convinced, when they bother to think about it at all, that Edith Maxwell got just what was coming to her.

Five miles away at Norton, a busy and fairly prosperous mining town of 5,000, sentiment is largely against the girl but a little more subtly expressed.

Sentiment in Norton.

Said one business woman:

"I feel sorry for Edith Maxwell. Personally, I'd like to see her get out. But after all, she did kill her father. Besides she won't spend more than 12 years in the penitentiary. In Virginia the sentence is cut in half for good behavior. Of course, Edith Maxwell would be a model prisoner. Why, she's a little angel, according to the people who think the judge was hard on her."

Another members of one of Norton's better class families said:

"Yes, it is too bad about that Maxwell girl. Isn't it a shame that no one would get up at the trial and say a single good word for her?"

That seems to be a general cry—no one at the trial said "anything good about Edith."

The defense used no character witnesses. The young school-teacher's lawyers seem to have taken it for granted that everyone in the community knew Edith Maxwell as a well-behaved young woman.

Only Three Witnesses.

There were only three witnesses for the defense at the first trial in the big stone courthouse a little more than two weeks ago—Edith herself, her mother, and her 11-year-old sister, Mary Catherine. They were the only ones in the Maxwell white-frame shack at Pound on that midnight last July, when Edith hit her father on the head with a slipper when he tried to beat her and threatened to kill her for staying out after dark with a neighbor boy.

Letters, Money Pour In to Help Maxwell Girl

As donations continued to pour in to the Edith Maxwell defense fund being conducted by The Post, the letters accompanying them showed no lessening of the tide of sympathy for the mountain girl who faces 25 years in prison.

14 contributions swelled the fund to a total of $543.73 as $32.00 was received yesterday.

Excerpts from typical letters follow:

"Am sure the good Lord will not punish that poor girl for something she did not do."

"How much better to free her and let her make something of her life, and help to make her mother's life happy. No doubt it was a most unhappy one—with few pleasures or comforts, and Edith added those few comforts to the little place called home."

"The Governor of Virginia should be requested to pardon this girl, and compliment her for her courage."

"Enclosed please find my mite toward the splendid thing that you are doing— I only wish I were able to do more for that persecuted girl. May God bless your efforts."

the men who investigated the case and prosecuted it were unimpressed.

Attorney General David T. Wilent declined to comment. George K. Large, former Hunterdon County judge who was a special assistant attorney general for the prosecution, said he believed the verdict was "just."

Confession Reported Asked.

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—The New York Journal says today that Gov. Harold G. Hoffman made his midnight visit to Bruno Richard Hauptmann's death cell with the hope of obtaining a confession from the convicted kidnaper-slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

The New Jersey Governor, the Journal says, gave Hauptmann a week to consider an offer of $10,000 and life for a complete confession, then confronted the condemned man in the Trenton death house, only to hear Hauptmann plead again:

"I am innocent."

The offer to Hauptmann, according to the Journal, was made by a New Jersey official—not the Governor.

Visit Was October 17.

The Governor's visit to Hauptmann's cell, disclosed by the executive yesterday, took place on October 17.

The Journal says Gov. Hoffman went to the prison alone, at midnight, swore the warden to secrecy and then went to Hauptmann's cell to get his answer to the offer.

With his hand on a Bible, Hauptmann answered in the prison stillness, according to the Journal's account:

"I swear by my child's life that I have told the truth."

The New Jersey Governor and the prisoner could have touched each other had they cared to, the newspaper says, as only the spaced iron bars of the cell door separated them.

Were Face to Face.

The Governor sat in a chair facing the cell. Hauptmann stood, pleading, inside the bars.

The Governor listened far more than he talked, says the Journal, and just before leaving he told the condemned man:

"I give you my solemn word as Governor of this State that you will receive every consideration possible if your story is true."

Hoffman, at a press conference this morning, denied that he had offered clemency to Hauptmann.

A report some weeks ago that a life sentence and $10,000 had been offered the condemned man for a confession was denied at that time by the Governor.

Yesterday the Governor said his visit was solely to get Hauptmann's story at first hand.

Policeman and Prisoner Perish as Flames Block Rescue Efforts; Driver Faces Hearing on Manslaughter Charge.

Struck by an oil truck, a police scout car early yesterday became a funeral pyre for two men on the Richmond highway near Four Mile Run.

The dead:

William R. Harrison, 21, Chicago, a former Marine.

As the parked scout car was thrown 70 feet into a telephone pole, its gasoline tank exploded. The heat was so intense the six bullets in Shaw's revolver were discharged.

Shaw and Harrison screamed hysterically as they fought to open the smashed doors. Several rescue workers were driven back by the flames.

Firemen of No. 2 Engine Company risked their lives to prevent explosion of the 2,500 gallons of gasoline in the tank of the Shell Oil Co. truck. The flames were confined to the cab of the truck.

Axes were used to hack away the wreckage and remove the bodies of Shaw and Harrison.

Tried to Dodge Car.

John B. Nicholson, 32, 454 Forty-fourth street northwest, driver of the truck, was charged with manslaughter and released under $1,000 bond for a hearing Wednesday in Alexandria Police Court.

After an inquest, Llewellyn Powell, Alexandria coroner, ordered an investigation to determine whether the two cars had lights and whether the truck driver had sufficient sleep the previous night.

Nicholson testified he was driving toward Washington at about 25 miles an hour when he noticed the police car parked at the right side of the road in the path of his truck and only a dozen feet away. He said he made a desperate effort to avoid the collision.

Despite denials of policemen, the truck driver insisted there was no tail light on the scout car.

A governor, Nicholson added, prevented the truck from exceeding 30 miles an hour.

Vernon R. Wilt, an Arlington County policeman, said he saw the accident. He declared he waved a flashlight and shouted at Nicholson without attracting his attention. He reported he was almost run down in his efforts to stop the truck.

A tail light burned on the scout car, Wilt said. He estimated the speed of the truck at 40 miles an hour.

An hour before his death, Harrison was arrested when he drove another automobile into a ditch near the scene of the second wreck. Police charged he stole the first car from a parking lot near the Highway Bridge and drove it from the road while being chased.

He was arrested after the first crash by George P. McCann, a Fairfax County deputy sheriff. He was treated for a broken arm in Alexandria Hospital. While there he told police:

"I'm always getting in trouble. I wish I had been killed."

The fatal accident occurred when Shaw and Wilt paused to inspect the first wreck while removing Harrison to the Arlington County Jail.

In the crash that cost the lives of Shaw and Harrison, Joseph Doyle, owner of the Alcova Motor Co., who had been called earlier in the morning to remove the car in which Harrison was first injured, received minor hurts.

In the act of releasing a tow-line when the oil truck struck the police car and hurled it against the car he was attempting to tow, Doyle was thrown into a ditch. He was cut and bruised, and suffered severe shock. At Emergency Hospital physicians said he would recover.

Funeral services for Shaw will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Ives undertaking establishment, Clarendon. Burial will be in his old home, Drainsville, Va.

The body of Harrison is still being held at Wheatley's undertaking establishment in Alexandria awaiting word from relatives in Chicago.

Solution Is Hinted In Revenue Killing

U. S. Agent, Companion Slain in Night Club.

By the Associated Press.

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 6.—Officers investigating the mysterious slaying of an internal revenue officer and his companion at a night club here have obtained "material evidence" which may solve the case, it was learned reliably tonight.

Federal and State investigators remained tight-lipped after visiting the swanky Sheridan Night Club, where Louis Pappan, the revenue officer, and George Stewart, former police captain, were shot Wednesday.

M. J. McNulty, jr., hospital official, and George Hurford, bookmaker, who were arrested today, were released soon after a suit for a writ of habeas corpus was filed.

Two of six suspects still in jail are charged with murder in the case.

Bus Passengers See Killing, Hide on Floor to Escape Outlaws' Bullets.

By the Associated Press.

New Tazewell, Tenn., Dec. 6.—Three bandits, two believed to be escaped convicts, robbed a bank and later shot a sheriff to death in a highway gun battle today while a bus load of frightened passengers looked on.

The sheriff, L. B. Hutchinson, of Union County, was shot through the head as he attempted to block the bandits' flight near Maynardville.

He died two hours later in a Knoxville hospital.

As the last shots were fired, a bus drove up and passengers lay down on the floor to escape the bullets. None was wounded.

Three Escape Prison.

The robbery and battle followed the escape from the State prison at Nashville Tuesday of three convicted robbers—George Wilbur Moss, 23; Gus McCoig, 22, and Pete Dean, 18.

Moss was captured at Bunchtown Wednesday night. The other two escaped.

In their flight from Nashville they had stolen an automobile belonging to a Spring Hill physician. Mark Lewis, the bank cashier, said the car used in the holdup bore the same numbers as those of the stolen automobile.

The bandits got approximately $1,000 from the bank. Lewis said two of the bandits "looked like" pictures of McCoig and Dean. As they fled, a number of citizens fired at them, but they apparently escaped unscathed.

Sheriff Joins Hunt.

Sheriff Hutchinson, in adjoining Union County, set out to join in the widespread search. He was accompanied by Austin Matthews.

Matthews said they saw the bandit car and trailed it to a bridge where it stopped. Two of the men got out and started shooting.

Matthews and the sheriff began firing and, after a brief battle, Hutchinson fell. Matthews said when he had only one bullet left he tossed his gun to the bandits and held up his hands.

A Knoxville-Corbin, Ky., bus halted behind the battle and passengers who were not already hiding were ordered to lie down by the gunmen, who then fled.

Bandit Recaptured.

Weathers, Okla., Dec. 6 (AP).—Don Garrett, last of six prisoners who broke from the Muskogee jail Tuesday after fatally wounding Detective Chief Ben Bolton, was captured near here today.

Garrett's capture gave officers a clean sweep of the six. All now are either dead or in custody.

Dan T. Heady, of Kansas City, Mo., leader of the break, was slain by officers early today, and a companion, Dewey Gilmore, of Dallas, Tex., was wounded.

Heady and Gilmore met a blaze of gunfire when they failed to heed officers' commands to surrender after they were trapped in a farmhouse.

Third Found Dying.

Leonard Short, Galena, Mo., the third man captured, was found critically ill about a mile and a half from the farmhouse, and died a few hours later. His capture accounted for the last of the four O'Malley gangsters who fled the jail. Russell Land Cooper was taken yesterday while walking along a road near Clayton, Okla.

Heady and Gilmore were shot by a posse headed by Allen Stanfield, deputy United States marshal from Ada, and Sheriff Tom Jordan, of Muskogee.

Wife Faces Charge.

At the same time Mrs. Dan T. Heady, of Kansas City, wife of the slain mobster, was arraigned in Federal court at Muskogee on a charge of aiding in the break. She pleaded not guilty.

Officers said she visited Heady a few minutes before the latter produced a gun and liberated his companions on the mad dash for freedom.

Short's death was the fourth in connection with the delivery. Chief of Detectives Ben Bolton was fatally wounded and John Blackburn, of Conover, Wis., another prisoner, was killed.

Bolton was shot when he attempted to halt the break with a machine gun.

U. S. Native Held In Paris Gun Case

American Explains He Is Collector of Arms.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 6.—Dominique Recchia, an American plumbing contractor and a native of Newark, N. J., was arrested today on a charge of possessing arms.

Recchia had not declared his possession of arms under the new decree, which is aimed at the suppression of armaments in the hands of political "troops."

Police said their search of his house in suburban Choisy-Leroi revealed 19 rifles, 19 automatic pistols, 5 machine guns of various types and more than 1,000 cartridges.

Recchia, who is 31 years old, has lived in France since his childhood.

He told police he was a collector of guns and was not "interested in politics."

The American blamed a jealous rival collector for his arrest and said some of the guns in his home belonged to a shooting club, of which he is a member.

Brewery Blast Kills 2.

Strasbourg, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Two workers were killed and 20 injured today by a violent explosion in a brewery near Schiltigheim.

Yule Party to Aid Home.

A Christmas entertainment will be given by Mrs. Ernest W. Brown, wife of Maj. Brown, superintendent of police, for the benefit of the Eleanor Ruppert Home for the Aged. The entertainment is to be given at the home in Anacostia December 22 at 3 p. m.

Robbery Suspects Held.

Hull, Que., Dec. 6 (AP).—Police today took into custody two former employes of the Banque Provinciale du Canada and recovered $15,000 stolen from an accountant's car in a kidnap holdup in which Armand Nadeau, bank clerk, was killed yesterday.

North Dakota's Relief Botched, Burdick Claims

State Ready to Repudiate New Deal, He Believes; Booms Borah.

By the Associated Press.

North Dakota is ready to repudiate the New Deal, in the opinion of Representative Usher L. Burdick, but not in favor of a conservative Republican candidate.

Back at his desk, the North Dakota Republican yesterday blamed Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins for alienating his State from the Roosevelt ranks. He said the Federal Government had made a "botch" of the job of providing relief.

North Dakota, Burdick said, is one of four States in which relief is administered directly from Washington. Instead of checks being issued by the State administrator, he said, they are sent out by the national administrator. Administration was taken out of State hands during the regime of former Gov. William Langer.

Despite dissatisfaction with New Deal policies, Burdick said there was only one Republican so far mentioned as a candidate who could defeat President Roosevelt in North Dakota in 1936. He named Senator Borah as that man, but expressed the opinion the Idahoan would not be nominated.

"The Republican leadership doesn't want him," Burdick said. "They know the first thing he would do if elected President would be to issue some Federal Reserve notes, instead of continuing to pile up the national debt by issuance of bonds."

Burdick accused Hopkins of regarding the people of North Dakota as a "lot of long-haired Socialists" who could not be entrusted the job of directing relief. He said the State administration from top to bottom was in the hands of reactionaries," even though the State is "known to be 75 per cent progressive," so that when "people got to the relief agencies for help they deal with their enemies instead of their friends."

"I don't agree with those who are defending Roosevelt and attacking his advisers," Burdick said. "The President must accept responsibility for the defects of the relief administration. Hopkins has blown him out of the water in North Dakota."

He criticized Hopkins for sending into the State what he called "hard-boiled social workers from the East."

Speaking on behalf of Democratic Executive Committee of Georgia, Gov. Eugene Talmadge, shown at microphone in New York last night, assailed the New Deal. He disclosed that the opening wedge in an effort to split the "Solid South" against Roosevelt's Administration would start next month.

land thought of Administration "experiments," the archbishop laughed. He said:

"We are watching them with interest and with a little skepticism. We are glad they are being tried on someone else's doorstep. We can learn our lesson accordingly."

Unemployment has greatly decreased in England, he declared.

"English workers are losing interest in unemployment because of better times," he laughed.

Communist activities among the unemployed, however, are causing some consternation, the archbishop said.

"But revolutionary movements are not headed by the depressed people—it's by those who are better off."

As the discussion switched back to war, his grace said there is little fear that England will be drawn into conflict.

Within the League.

"England's only direct conflict will remain within the League of Nations."

Although admitting that recent British elections upheld rearmament, his grace said that England has no desire for a race in competitive armaments.

The archbishop came to the United States to attend the jubilee conference of the Student Volunteer Missionary Union at Indianapolis, December 27. His hosts in this country are the Most Rev. James DeWolf Perry, presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church, and Bishop Freeman.

He plans to remain about five weeks during which he will tour the States delivering lectures.

Tomorrow he will deliver a sermon at the celebration of Holy Communion in the great choir of Washington Cathedral.

Mrs. Temple accompanied the archbishop to America. They plan a visit to members of her family in Martinsville, Va.

His grace's dress is a strong contrast to clothes of America's clergy. Yesterday he wore a bishop's apron, with coat, breeches and gaiters. The gaiters are worn to his knees.

steadily all day, with gifts ranging from 10 cents to $10. At the Terminal Taxicab Co., whose drivers are bringing in free the gifts of toy contributors, the telephone was reported ringing all day with requests to call for toys for The Post's toy and doll fund. The method there is simple—a call to DEcatur 5130, and a request for a taxicab to carry the toys to The Post Building.

Judge Robert E. Mattingly, of Municipal Court, was among those who sent in cash gifts to be used for purchase of toys. His contribution was $5.

Contributions also came in the names of Laird Kiltie of Tweburn, a Scottish terrier, and Sandy Peyton Gordon, an Orkney terrier owned by Justice Peyton Gordon, of the District Supreme Court. These dogs, like others, have served as mascots of other Post toy funds in the past.

shall ask Congress to appropriate the larger amount which will be needed."

The order restoring relief payments to the December 1 level will not affect the 25 per cent cut ordered this month in payments and administrative force and expenditures. The restoration order will apply only to relief payments made in January. What will be done after that will depend on what occurs between now and the end of January, Allen said.

10,019 Cases on Relief.

It is estimated that under the 25 per cent cut order, relief expenditures in December will total $278,000. This will be supplemented by extra services estimated to cost something like $20,000 but which will not be paid for out of relief funds.

At the beginning of December there were 10,019 cases on relief. On December 1 WPA jobs were available for 3,000 persons. These are involved in projects already approved. All these jobs are expected to be filled before the end of the month. That, Commissioner Allen said, would leave some 7,000 cases on relief as of January 1. Upwards of 5,500 of these are unemployables.

To these unemployables is constantly being added a varying number of persons who are employable but who are not eligible for WPA jobs. During November 243 families were added to the rolls. There were 2,600 applicants. Half of these were refused. Others were dropped and many were transferred to WPA. The net result was a decrease of 1,000.

The number assigned to WPA jobs yesterday had reached 9,700. It is estimated 1,700 available for such jobs still were on relief. Most of these are men and women fitted for so-called white collar jobs. Adequate projects to provide jobs for these have not been approved by Federal authorities, it was said.

Warned of Starvation.

Decision to restore the cut for January and to fight for additional moneys was announced by the Commissioner after a day of conferences, which were preceded by warning that "slow starvation" would result under the reduced payments plan.

The warning was given by a group representing the social service committee of the Federation of Churches, the Council of Social Agencies, the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Association of Social Workers, and the Monday Evening Club.

The groups were headed, respectively, by Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, Louisia S. Roberts, Walter S. Ufford and Leifur Magnusson. Others who called on the Commissioners included Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, Allan P ope, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Gertrude H. Bowling, Adjutant Gilbert S. Decker, Louise McGuire, Mgr. John O'Grady, Mrs. Jesse C. Adkins, A. J. Driscoll, Morris Klass and the Rev. William L. Darby.

They had been officially authorized to speak for their organizations, they said, and "to earnestly urge the Commissioners unless sufficient additional Federal funds became immediately available, to draw upon the balance of the original $2,000,000 still to the credit of the District as found necessary to meet the present relief situation.

"In our judgment only in this manner can adequate food, shelter, fuel and clothing be provided for the destitute of the District of Columbia," they said.

Gov. Talmadge Calls for Split Of 'Solid South'

to the winds in boondoggling and its kindred activities."

His speech was broadcast.

Gov. Talmadge, who rode into office with President Roosevelt on the 1932 Democratic landslide, but who broke with his policies a few months later, said in the interview he would be proud to have his name on any State Presidential ticket.

"And I would like to examine the head of the bird who wouldn't," he added.

"President Roosevelt," he said, "is not a Democrat."

"If he secures the nomination by a convention parading in the name of the Democratic Party, it will be the last of those great principles enunciated by that great patriot, Thomas Jefferson, who said, 'The least governed are the best governed.'"

Assailing the Government's tax program, he said:

"This income tax business was started back in 1913. They didn't need it then and they don't need it now. They just wanted to give some friends some jobs.

"We could run the essentials of Government with seven-eighths less taxes than we have now."

Gov. Johnston Removes Three

By the Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., Dec. 6.—Gov. Olin D. Johnston, holding tightly to control of the State highway department by use of National Guardsmen, late today launched another attack upon the highway commission which won a sweeping legal victory over him yesterday.

Steadfastly ignoring the decision of the Supreme Court that his military seizure and direction of the department was without warrant of law, the 39-year-old executive issued an order declaring three members of the commission removed from office, and citing ten others to show cause December 13 why they should not be removed.

Chairman Charles O. Hearon, of Spartanburg, one of the trio ordered ousted said: "I expect we will appeal to the circuit courts under the procedure laid down by law as soon as the appeal can be prepared."

The Governor acted under a statute giving him authority to remove certain State officers after a hearing. The statute specifically provides that any removal action is subject to review by the judiciary.

Charges were preferred against Hearon, and Commissioners E. L. Culler and John C. Bethea by the Governor, and they were given a hearing before him shortly before he called out machine-gun troops and took control of the department October 28, after proclaiming it in a "state of insurrection."

His removal order today was the first announcement of the result of the hearing. No statement had been made early tonight of the charges, if any, lodged against the ten other commissioners who are politically hostile to the Governor. The fourteenth member of the commission was not involved, as he was appointed by Johnston to fill a vacancy.

Heavily reinforced troops were in charge of the department's offices today. The Orangeburg Machine Gun Company was ordered mobilized by Johnston almost immediately after the Supreme Court had ruled his military regime was without basis in law, and that his civilian "board of managers" were trespassers.

Court Directs Jury to Acquit Ex-Gov. Langer

Former Official to Face New Trial on Charge of Conspiracy.

By the Associated Press.

Bismarck, N. Dak., Dec. 6.—A directed verdict acquitting former Gov. William Langer of perjury charges today cleared away some of the local difficulties which have beset him since he lost his office 18 months ago.

The verdict, which also cleared three others of perjury charges, was returned in a case growing out of Langer's trial June, 1934, on Federal charges of conspiracy. He was convicted, granted a new trial and retried with three others last month when the jury disagreed. He was removed from office after his conviction.

A third trial on conspiracy charges growing out of alleged misuse of Federal funds, is scheduled to open next Tuesday.

District Attorney P. W. Lanier charged Langer and his associates made false statements in an affidavit of prejudice against Judge Andrew Miller, who presided in the first conspiracy trial. Defense objections, sustained by the court, today blocked his attempts to introduce testimony in support of this charge.

Lanier sought unsuccessfully to obtain testimony from E. E. Makiesky, of New York, former Associated Press correspondent here, who reported the first conspiracy trial. The court sustained defense objections to each essential question.

The trial began December 3, a little more than two weeks after the second conspiracy trial ended in a jury disagreement.

On trial with Langer are R. A. Kinzer, former relief secretary; Frank Vogel, former State highway commissioner, and Oscar Erickson, publisher of The Leader, political weekly.

The conspiracy charges against the same defendants are that they sought political funds from workers paid with relief and highway funds, thus obstructing Federal relief legislation.

Young G.O.P. Hear Boost for Landon

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., Dec. 6.—Young Republicans of eight States heard Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas described today as "an outstanding standard-bearer if he should decide to offer himself" for the party's Presidential nomination.

Gov. Landon, while remaining silent himself, has been talked for the nomination by friends in Kansas and elsewhere.

Sensing a chance to promote Landon, Kansas Young Republicans invited party workers from many States to the State convention which opened here today. There were delegates from Missouri, Iowa, Colorado, Nebraska, California, Texas and Oklahoma.

Don Hults, Lawrence (Kans.) attorney, said in the keynote address that Kansas Republicans "need look no further than your own State for an example of sincerity in governmental administration which the voters of 1936 will demand before they can again place confidence in a national administration."

China Reported Ready to Carry Case to League

May Charge Aggression; Britain Held Prepared to Cite Treaty.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 6.—The Chinese government, it was said in responsible quarters tonight, may take its dispute with Japan to the League of Nations, charging Tokyo with aggression in the northern provinces of China.

The British government, an informed source indicated, also may act against Japan in an attempt to preserve the territorial integrity of China, guaranteed under the nine-power treaty.

This source said Britain was considering representations to Tokyo, drawing attention to Japan's obligations under the nine-power pact.

The date of China's formal appeal to the League of Nations, it was reported reliably, depends on how the situation develops and how the signatories of the nine-power treaty react to the North China situation.

The Chinese Ambassador to London, Quo Tai-Chi, called the crisis to the notice of the British government early this week, pointing out Britain's obligations under the Nine-Power Pact.

Awaits Clarification.

The British government was understood to be awaiting clarification of the situation of some assurances from Japan before taking the next step.

Some quarters said there was a possibility of joint or simultaneous steps by signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, whose diplomatic representatives were said to be keeping closely informed of the North China situation.

(The signatories of the pact were the United States, Japan, China, Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Portugal and The Netherlands.)

Diplomats expressed the opinion the present North China crisis may seriously affect the International Naval Conference scheduled to open here December 9.

Compromise Reported.

Peiping, China, Dec. 6 (AP).—A tentative compromise agreement in North China's autonomy crisis was reported unofficially tonight to have been reached.

The Rengo (Japanese) News Agency said temporary settlement had been effected at a conference between emissaries of the Chinese national government and leaders of North China.

This plan, Rengo stated, will be submitted to Maj. Gen. Hayo Tada, Japanese military commander in North China, and to the Nanking government and is subject to their approval.

Rengo's report came after 17 Japanese airplanes had roared over this city, center of the crisis, during the day. Chinese circles said the maneuvers were designed either as a demonstration in behalf of the independence of North China or to intimidate the negotiations from Nanking into making concessions.

Creation of a north China commission, it was stated, is provided in the compromise plan. This commission would be given wide powers of self-government and the new Nanking currency reform program, involving nationalization of silver, would not be applicable in the region.

(During the colds season, gargle night and morning with Vicks Voratone Antiseptic, especially designed for safe daily use to aid in defense against infection which may enter through the mouth.)

2. To help PREVENT Many Colds—At the first warning nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze, use Vicks Va-tro-nol—just a few drops up each nostril. Va-tro-nol is especially designed for the nose and upper throat—where most colds start. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in the early stages.

3. To help END a Cold Sooner If a cold has developed, or strikes without warning, rub throat and chest at bedtime with Vicks VapoRub. VapoRub acts two ways at once: (1) By stimulation through the skin, like a poultice or plaster; (2) By inhalation of its penetrating medicated vapors, direct to inflamed air-passages. Through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm, soothes irritation, helps break congestion.

'BreechesBible' Among Relics At Alexandria

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Priceless Bibles and ecclesiastical volumes will be exhibited today from 2 to 5 p. m. in Christ Church parish hall, adjacent to the historic old church, and again tomorrow afternon at the same hours, commemorating the 400th anniversary of the Coverdale Bible. John W. Herndon, superintendent of Christ Church Sunday school, is general chairman for the event.

Vieing with the Bible of George Washington in interest will be a rare old book, published in 1600, called "The Breeches Bible," because in the third chapter of Genesis, seventh verse, is a reference to Adam and Eve, saying, "and they sewed figge tree leaves together and made themselves breeches." It is understood very few copies of this book are now in existence, and next to the Gutenburg Bible this is probably the rarest edition. The book is the property of Miss Gertrude Baker, of Boston, a niece of Senator and Mrs. Wilder Keyes, and was loaned to this exhibit through their courtesy.

Many Priceless Tomes.

Mrs. Keyes has loaned more than a dozen Bibles, Testaments and documents of intense interest, one a tiny Testament given by Ruth, Countess of Winchelsea and Nottingham, to her god-child, "little Ruby," who was Ruby Johnson, famous child dancer, at the time of her command performance before Queen Victoria. This book is the property of Miss Catherine Greer, daughter of Ruby Johnson, and a cousin of Mrs. Keyes, and now her house guest.

Still another Testament loaned by Mrs. Keyes is one that was given by Senator Keyes, then Gov. Keyes, of New Hampshire, to a soldier going to war, in accordance with the custom of that State, that the Governor presents a Testament to every son of New Hampshire who goes to war.

John W. Herndon has exhibited the Bible of Commodore Mathew Fontaine Maury, his collateral ancestor, now the property of Mrs. Littleton Fitzgerald, of Richmond.

Mrs. William J. Boothe has loaned the Bible of Philip Ludwell, her ancestor, and one of the early Colonial Governors. This book was printed in 1729 and the bookplate shows the coat-of-arms of the Ludwell family.

Special Hours Arranged.

Special hours have been arranged for the Sunday school pupils of all churches in the city to view this exhibit, other than the time designated for the public view. Christ Church Sunday School group will devote the regular Sunday school hour, 9:30 a. m. tomorrow, viewing the historic and sacred documents.

The Rev. Dr. Wallace Rollins, dean of the Virginia Episcopal Theological Seminary, will preach in Christ Church tomorrow at the 11 o'clock service, speaking on the New Testament, and the rector of the church, the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, will talk on the Old Testament at the evening service.

Alexandria Post, No. 24, American Legion, at a meeting held on Thursday night, in Gadsby's Tavern, received from Eighth District Commander Sidney Weil the National Distinguished Service certificate for meritorious work last year. Past Commander Everett Hellmuth, under whose leadership the certificate was won, accepted for the post.

Commander Harry N. Jones, Sidney Weil and Everett Hellmuth compose a committee to erect the annual community Christmas tree at Prince and Washington streets.

A three-day triduum opened in St. Mary's Catholic Church at 7:30 tinue each night at the same hour, o'clock last night and will conwith a reception to new members tomorrow night. There will be special devotions each night and sermons will be preached by the Rev. A. T. Herring, of Brisbane, Australia.

Martin E. Greene, business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, has announced that contribution boxes have been placed in the local theaters for donations to the Will Rogers Memorial Fund.

Life Terms Commuted In Mine War Slayings

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 6 (AP).—Two men serving life for the "battle of Evarts" in Harlan County in the spring of 1931 were made eligible for parole today by Gov. Ruby Laffoon. They are William Hightower, leader in the labor clash in which four men were killed, and Bill Hudson, coal miner.

The Governor commuted their sentences to four years and six months. The department of public welfare was expected to parole them tomorrow. Five other men serving life sentences for the Evarts clash and a group serving shorter terms are expected to receive clemency before Laffoon leaves office next Tuesday.

Father's Slayer Pleads Not Guilty to Charge

Georgetown, Ky., Dec. 6 (AP).—Francis Warren, 24, pleaded innocent before Judge G. G. Barkley today to a charge of manslaughter in the fatal shooting of his father, Charles Warren, 67.

The son claimed after the shooting Saturday that he shot to save his sister, Betsy, 19, "from a beating." His $2,000 bond was continued until the Februr y grand jury meets to act on the case.

Brewery Pay Roll Seized.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 6 (AP).—Bandits held up the cashier and a chauffeur of the Narragansett Brewing Co. this afternoon and escaped with the weekly payroll of between $6,000 and $7,000.

Conflict of 2 Welfare Boards Deprives 31 Children of Relief

Montgomery County Has Dual Setup to Administer Local, U. S. Funds.

Although Montgomery County has two welfare boards, 31 children are being denied aid because no machinery has been established for their care.

The county relief situation has been in a state of turmoil for months. The original county welfare board, planned to handle all funds, has been supplemented by a second welfare board, the Department of Public Welfare handling only county funds.

Since the administration of relief for children is still a county function, and funds for this work are apportioned by the county commissioners, the Department of Public Welfare should undertake their care. No machinery has been set up for new cases, although old cases are being cared for by the Social Service League, a private charitable organization.

Chairman Resigns.

The situation further was disturbed by the resignation of Robert E. Bondy, chairman of the advisory committee of the Montgomery County Department of Public Welfare. He gave as his reason "pressure of other duties make it necessary for me to resign."

Judge Thomas C. Kelley, of the County Orphans' Court, is acting chairman of the advisory committee.

The only member of either county welfare board with social service training is Miss Lavinia Engle, of Forest Glen, prominent in social welfare work for years both locally and nationally.

In an effort to iron out the situation, Miss Engle has offered to resign several times, but both State and county officials have asked her to remain.

Dual Setup.

Cognizance of the confused dual welfare board setup was taken by George W. Davis, chairman of the annual drive of the Social Service League, in his report to the board of directors.

Mr. Davis said that failure of the league drive for funds was partly due to the confusion in the mind of the public regarding the welfare boards.

"We have not and cannot for some time to come, overcome the impression that the Social Service League has become involved in the difficult and very uncertain political situation existing in the county with regard to welfare work," he reported.

Maryland has a background of years of private relief agencies. Montgomery County for many years appropriated funds for relief which were administered by the Social Service League.

When the depression brought its unemployment problem and the Federal Government ruled that public funds could not be administered by private agencies, the Maryland Board of State Aid and Charity took over the administration of funds.

Present Setup.

An act of the special 1933 session of the State Legislature created the present setup — a county welfare board supervised by the Board of State Aid and Charity. The county board was to administer all welfare moneys, county, State and Federal.

The Montgomery County commissioners created a second welfare board to handle county funds apportioned for relief. This advisory committee of the county department of public welfare was to take the supervisor of county aid, whose place is abolished under the new setup, and make him business manager.

The post of supervisor was a political plum and its incumbent had to be cared for by the Fusion Party. The supervisor, P. Ray Souder, was then appointed business manager for the new department, and Miss Alice Merrill, a sister-in-law of Judge Kelley, was made executive secretary.

The fully staffed Welfare Board which had been created to take care of all relief, was thus left with only Federal and State funds to administer.

County Commissioner Richard H. Lansdale recently spoke heatedly against the dual welfare boards and urged that they be consolidated to save the cost of the dual staffs.

The work of caring for dependent children has been carried on by the Social Service League for months. Those children already on the rolls continue to receive care, but new cases have no machinery for their placement and must continue without aid.

Because of the like nature of the two boards, constant friction and duplication of endeavor have resulted, with the result that the county relief situation daily becomes worse and worse.

Out of Politics.

The entire intent of the welfare act was to keep the welfare work of the State and counties out of politics. The board of State aid and charity was to prepare a list of qualified persons to be appointed by the county commissioners of each county.

The Montgomery County Commissioners hurriedly named a welfare board, hoping that since it was in existence the members would be named to the State welfare group. When it was found that several of those named were ineligible because of connections with other public or private relief organizations or public offices, the department of public welfare was named. The members of the welfare board who were ineligible were appointed to this group.

The county welfare department board includes Judge Kelley, Mayor D. M. Bladford, of Rockville; Commissioner Karn, Mrs. C. W. Mitchell and Mrs. John H. Werner.

18th Century Flag Hoisted by Mistake

An absent-minded attendant at the Court of Claims turned back the pages of history a century and a half yesterday when he hoisted a reproduction of the flag under which Washington defeated Cornwallis at Yorktown instead of the Stars and Stripes.

A clerk in the State, War and Navy building across the way detected the error around 9 a. m., almost two hours after the banner was run up.

"Why is the Court of Claims flying the 13 stars on a field of blue instead of the modern 48 stars and 13 stripes?" he queried.

The mistake was corrected, then explained. It seems the court had ordered a new flag to replace one that had been torn by the high winds. The order was filled properly but the delivery included, as if for good measure, a copy of the old banner. Performing his morning duty, the watchman hoisted a flag. He did not notice that the emblem belonged to the eighteenth century.

'Playless' Play Given As Charity Benefit

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 6 (AP). Thousands of enthusiastic playgoers did not attend the playless play last night, which all advance notices stamped as undoubtedly the finest production of its kind in Fredericksburg.

Fourteen members of the cast did not learn their lines but that made no difference to the director who hadn't been to any rehearsals herself.

The "entertainment" was the outgrowth of the Woman's Club's laudable ambition to raise funds for the relief of crippled children and tuberculosis sufferers in Fredericksburg.

The women decided to have a play, but, objectors pointed out, some people don't like plays. Woman's ingenuity circumvented that point so successfully that last night's colossal, stupefying, sight-defying play satisfied both those who love and those who loath the drama.

For the price of an admission ticket the purchaser was privileged to stay at home.

'Ad' Reunites Mother, Girl After 23 Years

East Falls Church Woman, Now Mother of Four, Finds Parent.

A mother and her daughter have been reunited after 23 years. The daughter, Mrs. J. S. Caton, of East Falls Church, yesterday told the story.

When 7 years old, she was taken away from her mother by her grandfather and placed in a Methodist Orphanage at Richmond.

Three years later she went with the family of Mrs. Edwena Montgomery of Luray, and lived with them for several years, later living with Mrs. J. D. Frazier, the wife of a Luray justice of the peace. She was living here when she married Caton.

Now the mother of four children, she decided to look for her mother. A letter to the Virginia Bureau of Vital Statistics followed. Her mother's name was Mrs. Bessie Walker, they told her. She placed an advertisement in a Richmond paper. It was read by the mother.

Letters were exchanged and Sunday the two women were reunited.

Killeen Slayer's Hearing Is Set For Thursday

Attorneys to Plead Self-Defense; Pugh to Press Murder Charge.

Lillian Callahan Maddock, 36, who killed Edward V. (Eddie) Killeen, 50, veteran Washington gambler, two weeks ago today, will be given a preliminary hearing Thursday in the Rockville Police Court.

After testimony is given, Judge Smith will decide whether the woman is to go free or whether there is sufficient evidence to hold her for the Montgomery County grand jury.

There have been reports that Mrs. Maddock's attorneys—Stedman Prescott and Harry Whelan—would seek to have the charge against the woman reduced from murder to manslaughter so that she could get her temporary freedom on bond, murder not being a bailable offense in the county. But these reports, it appeared yesterday, are not well founded.

Murder Charge Pressed.

Under the Maryland law, it was pointed out, Judge Smith does not have the power to change a charge. He may only decide whether to free Mrs. Maddock or hold her for the grand jury.

The grand jury, which is meeting next month, may indict Mrs. Maddock for manslaughter, but State's Attorney James H. Pugh apparently is determined to ask for a murder indictment.

If she is so charged when she goes to trial, the jury will act as judge of the law as well as of the fact. That is to say, if the jurors feel that Mrs. Maddock is guilty, they will specify to what degree they think she is guilty—murder in the first degree, second degree, or manslaughter.

Self-Defense Plea.

In Thursday's preliminary hearing, Attorneys Prescott and Whelan will argue that Mrs. Maddock's case is such a clear-cut one of self-defense that she should be freed. Failing in the hearing, they will make the same plea in the formal trial.

Mrs. Maddock, they will contend, shot Killeen because he threatened to kill her. It was, they will argue, his life or hers.

The woman, a former narcotics peddler, told a caller the other day that she still is in love with Eddie Killeen, or, at least, with his memory. She was indignant over suggestions that she killed him at the behest of Killeen's rivals in the underworld.

Killeen, she said, was in constant fear of his life. When he ate, she said, he kept a revolver on the table alongside his plate.

Montagnac COATS

. . . to the painstaking selection of choice wools to be used in Montagnac cloth.

. . . to the Montagnac mills in France where generations of the same family have made it their business to produce the Montagnac, and only the Montagnac, cloth.

. . . to the master designers whose art is at its best in the styles they create for Montagnac coats.

. . . to the very limited number of fine tailors in America who are permitted to make up the Montagnac cloth.

. . . and to the equally choice firms who are permitted to offer this "prince of overcoats."

There have been many copies of Montagnac cloth, but the original Montagnac has always been so far superior that the courts have seen fit to protect it by law from spurious imitations.

It is our happy privilege to invite your inspection of authentic Montagnac coats, tailored expressly for Woodward & Lothrop by Rogers Peet.

Roosevelt Call To Honor Bible Is Heeded Here

Many Churches to Mark 400th Anniversary of Its Printing.

Heeding the call of President Roosevelt, who from Warm Springs, Ga., has urged Nation-wide observance of Universal Bible Sunday tomorrow, Washington churches, particularly their Bible classes, will bring to an end a commemoration of the 400th anniversary of the printed English Bible.

Many pastors have announced anniversary sermons. Congregations have planned special exercises. Bible classes everywhere will devote at least a part of their lesson periods to the anniversary theme.

One of the largest meetings will come Monday night, when the Organized Bible Class Association conducts a meeting in the social hall of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle. Delegates from all adult Bible classes in the city have been invited, and each will have an opportunity to read his favorite verse from his own Bible. Several rare Bibles will be on display.

Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of National City Church, will give the principal address of the service. Page McK. Etchison, president of the association, will preside. William E. Braithwaite will have charge of the musical service, and H. F. Winn, president of the Washington Bible Society, will lead in prayer.

In urging the observance of Universal Bible Sunday tomorrow, President Roosevelt wrote to the American Bible Society, which is sponsoring the day of commemoration, as follows:

"I have learned with sincere interest of the plans for the observance of December 8 as Universal Bible Sunday. Any movement which has as its object a deeper understanding of and therefore a more profound reverence for the Holy Scriptures has my wholehearted approval. And I am gratified to know that the American Bible Society, which for more than a century has been so active in distributing this greatest of all books over the face of the earth, is unwearied in its work of spreading knowledge of the Sacred Word.

"A great writer has said that if everything else in our language should perish, the English Bible would alone suffice to show the whole extent of its beauty and power. I therefore have peculiar pleasure in wishing Godspeed to this worthy movement."

Selassie Sends League Protest UponBombings

By the Associated Press.

Geneva,, Dec. 6.—Ethiopia's Emperor, emerging unscathed from the bombing of Dessye, his imperial battle headquarters, protested bitterly to the League of Nations tonight against "the killing of women and children and the bombardment of Red Cross hospitals" by Italian war planes.

Within a few hours after a Fascist air fleet had rained 1,000 bombs on Dessye, the Emperor wirelessed Geneva:

"We have ourselves established the deaths of a woman and two children. The American hospital at Dessye, which carries with authorization the markings of the Red Cross, has been seriously damaged.

"Although Italy has never respected the engagements which she has undertaken toward Ethiopia, we believe it to be our duty to ask you to communicate to the states which are members of the League these new violations by Italy of international law and customs."

Gives References.

The Negus, over his own signature, asserted the Dessye raid also "was established by four Red Cross doctors, namely, Drs. Dassius, Loeb, Schuptler and Bellot, and by representatives of the Associated Press, the Times, Reuter's (the British News Agency), the Chicago Tribune and the (London) Daily Express."

Since the war began, Selassie said, "it has been evident to us that the Italian government has adopted a policy of destroying our people, not by the use of its own troops, but solely by mechanical means and native troops recruited in Italian colonies.

"The Italian government may, indeed, consider itself authorized to bombard us when we go out to share the sufferings of our soldiers and to defend our soil.

"But the bombardment of open towns, such as Dabat, Gondar and numerous villages inhabited by noncombatant peasants and containing neither troops nor means of defense, the killing of women and children and the bombardment of Red Cross hospitals are undeniably violations of international law."

53 Killed, 200 Wounded.

Dessye, Ethiopia, Dec. 6.—Italian bombing planes failed today in a daring attempt to kill Emperor Haile Selassie.

Ten giant Caproni bombers roared over the horizon at dawn, showering bombs upon the defenseless center of the Emperor's northern headquarters. They damaged the Royal Palace—their obvious target—only slightly, but set fire to the American Missionary Hospital.

Fifty-three persons were killed and 200 wounded, it was estimated.

One bomb crashed through the big Red Cross painted beside the Stars and Stripes on the corrugated iron roof of the hospital. Another hit the Dessye branch of the Bank of Abysinnia.

Occupants of the hospital had been evacuated when the planes first appeared and were not injured. The fire quickly was extinguished.

The United Press correspondent viewed the bombardment from his camp near the Seventh Day Adventist Hospital. The thunderous roar of the trimotored ships quickly filled the streets with excited natives, who fled to the hills.

The dawn's first rays cast a silver glint on the wings of the speeding Italians, who were in two "V" formations of five planes each.

The planes zoomed across the city releasing their cargo of destruction in a hail of whistling explosives. It was evident that they were seeking the palace nestling serenely in a grove of towering eucalyptus trees.

Jets of earth spurted up all around the palace, shrouding it with smoke. The Emperor reported afterward to the Empress Menen at Addis Ababa that the little Duke of Harar stood fearlessly in the garden with him observing the bombardment.

Guns Turned Upward.

The planes circled and swung back, again releasing bombs in the center of the city. The clatter of anti-aircraft guns, machine guns and old smooth bore rifles from the military encampments ringing Dessye added to the din.

A French newspaperman, Georges Goyon, and a Swedish nurse were among the injured. Both suffered leg injuries. The nurse's leg was amputated.

After twice raking the city in full strength, four planes returned to drop the remainder of their bombs. The Capronis then flew back over the hills to the north.

Approximately 700 bombs were dropped. Damage was slight, for most of the buildings destroyed were typical Ethiopian tukals or mud huts. Two rooms of the Adventist Hospital were scorched, but can be repaired easily.

Many women and children, crying piteously, swarmed to the barbed wire around the hospital, wailing at tragedies in the smouldering city.

As soon as the Italian planes were out of sight, the natives rushed back to view the damage, which was considered remarkably low in view of the number of bombs dropped. Thousands of rounds of ammunition fired by the Ethiopians apparently had even less effect upon the invading planes.

Anti-foreign feeling ran high at first, but the populace became stoical as it calmed. Many boasted that henceforth they would not fear the Italian planes.

A visit to several of the troop encampments outside the city indicated no attempt had been made to bomb them, adding to the impression that the objective of the Italians was to deprive the Ethiopians of their Emperor. If the Emperor had been killed the Ethiopians' resistance probably would have crumbled.

peror's Belgian military officers who has been censor at Dessye, was wounded in the left arm.

After the third bombing the Emperor, followed by his entourage, made a hasty inspection of the damage, visiting the hospital, which is Red Cross headquarters.

The bombardment is believed by the Emperor's entourage to signal the beginning of an Italian offensive to counteract the projected Ethiopian offensive in the north.

The populace fears the Italians will appear outside Dessye afoot soon to follow up the bombardment.

"We stayed there at our own risk."

Thus did Dr. M. E. Kern, conference general secretary at Takoma Park headquarters of the Seventh Day Adventists, comment yesterday on the bombing of the organization's hopsital at Dessye, Ethiopia.

Beyond that spokesmen for the denomination declined to be quoted on the incident pending receipt of official notification and possible action of the State Department. The two Americans in the hopsital at the time of the bombing were Dr. A. R. Stadin, superintendent, and Noncombatants Slain.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 6 (AP).—An Ethiopian communiqué said "today six Italian airplanes bombed Gondar wtih incendiary bombs. Four women and two children were killed and many homes were burned."

(Gondar is near Lake Tana, a region of vital British interest because it is the source of water supply for the Sudan. An Ethiopian column was bombed near Gondar yesterday and Italians claimed this attack converted an Ethiopian advance into a retreat.)

London, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—An Italian reconnoitering column of between 300 and 400 men, with 8 armored cars and tanks, virtually was wiped out by Ethiopians in a desperate fight Sunday at Bulaleh, the Daily Mail's Somaliland correspondent reported today in delayed dispatches. The correspondent said the information came from several independent sources.

He reported the Italians unexpectedly encountered about 2,000 Ethiopians entrenched around Bulaleh, who opened an intense fire with machine guns. Ethiopian reinforcements coming up on the flanks prevented the Italians from retreating, while an additional 2,000 Ethiopians attacked from the rear, the dispatch said.

Selassie Near Death As Bomb Hits Nearby

London (Saturday), Dec. 7.—Italian bombers came within 2 yards of killing or maiming Emperor Haile Selassie during the air raid on Dessye yesterday, the News Chronicle's correspondent at the northern Ethiopian headquarters reported today.

A bomb fell within 15 feet of the Emperor and wounded several soldiers who were only 6 feet away from where the King of Kings was crouching on the ground, firing an anti-aircraft gun, the correspondent reported.

Il Duce Likely To Defy League In Talk Today

that the Italian viewpoint has not changed."

Thus another fiery appeal to the nation by Il Duce was anticipated tomorrow. His words will be broadcast into every town and village.

Mussolini is represented as determined to settle the crisis in his own way. His way is a crushing victory over Ethiopia, with Emperor Haile Selassie suing for peace.

Each day is numbered in Italy. Everyone was reminded that this is the "nineteenth day of the siege" laid down by the League of Nations.

Four million farmers were pledged by their leaders today to grow all the food Italy needs. They promised a speedy 20 per cent increase in rabbits and poultry.

Automobile owners began giving their old cars to the country. Gold came into the treasury in a steady stream.

Rome, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—If the powers want Italy to talk peace they must abandon plans to extend League of Nations sanctions to her vital war needs, such as oil, the government spokesman indicated tonight.

"Pacification can only be advanced if there is no further talk of embargoes against Italy," the spokesman asserted.

Laval Granted Support; Franc Gains Quickly

Chamber Votes Confidence After Political Troops Agree to Dissolve.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 6.—Premier Pierre Laval seemed safely past parliamentary dangers for the time being tonight, his hand strengthened for his fight against monetary devaluation and efforts to solve the European-African crisis.

He wrested a vote of confidence, 351 to 219, from the Chamber of Deputies by promptly turning to his advantage the agreement of Nationalists and Leftists to dissolve their political troops.

The franc, long in gradual decline because of the dark political situation, immediately skyrocketed in unofficial foreign exchange trading.

It jumped 5½ centimes in relation to the dollar, closing at 15.125 francs (6.6116 cents to the franc). The New York overnight rate was 6.58625 cents to the franc. This was the lowest dollar rate here since September. The franc also gained against the British pound.

Third Victory.

Laval already had gained a vote of confidence on his financial policy, today's being his third victory since Parliament reconvened November 18.

The premier, whose cabinet is dubbed the "save the franc" government, introduced three bills in the chamber today providing for dissolution of the political leagues. Leftists had threatened his overthrow unless the Nationalists were curbed, charging the Rightists planned a "civil war" to establish a Fascist government.

Then he called for a vote of confidence on his proposal that the chamber consider the measures at once.

One bill would outlaw "combat organizations or private militias" and political uniforms, insignias and arms. The other two would increase the penalties for illegal possession of weapons and provide for prosecution of publications which "incite to murder."

Asks Big Vote.

Laval asked for a large majority vote to permit him "to pursue my work in the foreign field as well as at home."

Government bonds and stocks shot up on the bourse today. It was closed when the vote came, but Laval was virtually assured of being retained in power.

Leaders of the militant political leagues had announced themselves they were disbanding their semi-military "troops" as a gesture of national solidarity.

Outstanding among these leagues is the Croix de Feu, a World War veterans organization with Fascist tendencies which claims a membership of 712,000. Communist and Socialists also agreed to dissolve "our semi-military formations."

Ex-Husband Sought In Shooting of Two

Women Injured; Assailant Flees Across Fields.

By the Associated Press.

Mason, Mich., Dec. 6.—Two women—Mrs. Vivian Morrison, 30 years old, and her sister, Miss Hazel Hunter, 40—were wounded by gunfire at their farm home near Leslie late today, when an assailant with a pistol fired a volley of shots at them.

Sheriff Allan A. McDonald ordered a search for Mrs. Morrison's estranged husband, Harry Morrison.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hunter, mother of the two women, and Mrs. Morrison's small son were not injured. Officers, called to the home of Mrs. Hunter, brought both women to a hospital here, where physicians said Miss Hunter's condition was critical. She was shot through the abdomen, and Mrs. Morrison was struck in the arm.

Mrs. Hunter told officers the man, whom she identified as Morrison, came to the home just before nightfall. Entering the house, he produced a pistol, she said, and began firing. He escaped by running across a field.

Gloom Prevails As Navy Parley Nears Opening

U. S. Delegates Indicate London Conference Will Not Succeed.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 6.—America's delegation arrived today for the fifth naval conference since the World War, but failed to bring any marked optimism.

A general air of gloom prevailed in official and diplomatic quarters in advance of the formal opening Monday.

Frankly stating the United States will consider all suggestions and hope for the best, the Americans, however, made it plain immediately that no American interests will be sacrificed.

The whole political instability of the world, combined with the wide divergency in viewpoints of the various powers, makes chances for the conference's success most difficult in the view of Americans.

One hopeful advance aspect, however, it was said at American headquarters, is that amid the many discouraging factors is the mutual desire of all powers to avoid a costly naval race. The Americans, it was learned, brought no definite plan.

Five powers and the British Dominions will attend the conference. The United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy will seek a new limitation pact replacing the Washington and London treaties, expiring at the end of next year.

When the Americans arrived at Waterloo Station they were welcomed officially by representatives of the British admiralty and foreign office. The Italian delegation was also greeted by the same official welcomers.

"We are most desirous of success and hope the naval conference will have a successful conclusion," said Norman H. Davis, Washington's "Ambassador-at-Large" and head of America's delegation.

All delegations will meet separately with the British Sunday for a series of preliminary exploratory talks.

Up To The Liquor Trade.

It is apparent that the lines are tightening between wets and drys generally and that a considerable engagement between the two sides is in prospect for the District of Columbia. To date, most of the skirmishing has been carried on by what might be termed the mercenaries—the officers of anti-liquor associations on the one side and representatives of the liquor business on the other. By and large, the general public has not yet been enlisted for the campaign.

The air at the moment is filled with statistics. The chairman of the ABC board commends local dealers for the fact that 95 per cent of them are giving full cooperation in the observance of the control laws. Research by the Anti-Saloon League indicates that jail commitments for intoxication in the District have increased some 60 per cent since 1932. But statistics have always been available to support any argument. Automobile accidents due to drunken driving are increasing, is the common cry of the drys. This signifies little, reply those who note that the larger number of cars on the road and the greatly increased horsepower of new model engines are among many factors not reckoned in the computations.

The time may come when wets and drys will settle inter-organization squabbles and go to the mat on the fundamental question of whether Repeal has improved or degraded the community. Continued defeat for prohibition—and it is reasonable to assume that the majority of the Washingtonians desire such an outcome—will then depend largely on the ability of the community to demonstrate that the liquor business has developed a respectable code of ethics, and one which is rigorously observed.

There has been formed in Washington an association of liquor dealers which counts among its worthy objectives maintenance of high professional standards and opposition to dry propaganda. To sustain the first aim is to succeed in the second. But as long as there is any chance of reviving the old whisky rings and kindred abominations the repeal of Repeal will remain a possibility.

The Federal Contribution.

Commissioner Hazen's inquiry into the obligations of the Federal Government as a "taxpayer" in the District strengthens the hope that the current revenue program will not peter out in another futile controversy. Apparently the Commissioner, with the aid of the Special Tax Committee, is trying to work out a reasonable formula through which the Federal contribution to the Capital City may be automatically adjusted each year. Certainly that is the first essential step in any comprehensive fiscal plan.

A study of this sort was recommended last April by the Treasury experts who submitted to the President an analysis of the comparative tax burdens in Washington and other cities. As was then pointed out, the District is not strictly comparable to any other American city. Certain functions of State and county as well as municipal government are carried out by the local authorities. Washington is required to maintain extensive parks, streets, etc., yet it is not permitted by Congress to accumulate a debt. The unreasonableness of trying to adjust local taxes to any arbitrary figure obtained by analyzing the revenue of other cities of similar size ought to be clearly recognized.

Tax-exempt Federal property in the District is the chief element in Mr. Hazen's analysis. He estimates that 25 to 30 per cent of the property that could properly be taxed belongs to the Government. With the rapid expansion of Government buildings, this area is steadily expanding. Under the present policy, therefore, a smaller percentage of the property is required to supply a larger part of the revenue, since the Federal contribution has been drastically reduced in recent years. As the Government continues to expand this problem is certain to become more acute.

Secretary Ickes recently proposed that the PWA pay municipalities the equivalent of taxes on low-rental housing projects operated by the Government. If that proposal is valid, certainly Federal authorities ought to recognize a similar obligation to the District. It may not be possible to work out an entirely equitable arrangement by attributing tax liability to the Government on all of its property here. A number of other factors, such as extraordinary outlays by reason of the fact that this is the Capital City, and service rendered the District by Federal agencies, ought to be considered. But if there is any disposition to analyze the problem in a non-political atmosphere, a solution should not be difficult.

Warnings To Japan.

While couched in diplomatic language, both Secretary Hull's statement to the press and Sir Samuel Hoare's address in the House of Commons, carry pointed warnings to Japan. As Mr. Hull points out, the "unusual political struggle" going on in North China is "rightfully and necessarily of concern not alone to the government and people of China, but to all the many powers which have interests in China." Continued encroachment by the Japanese upon those interests, in violation of the nine-power pact, would bring about a situation which the United States could not afford to ignore.

In reply to the British request for a statement of Japan's intentions, the latter government has disavowed any plan for military intervention in China and reiterated its claim that the autonomy move is entirely of local origin. Following close upon those disclaimers, however, come reports that the Chinese minister of war, Ho Ying-ching, has been brusquely ordered by the Japanese military to leave Peiping. And Japanese army planes have been observed circling over Gen. Ho's residence after dropping pamphlets urging Peiping to declare independence of the Nanking government. These brazen encroachments upon Chinese sovereignty may be regarded as normal procedure in Tokyo, but it would be a grave mistake for that government to assume that other treaty signatories are oblivious to what is taking place.

The effect of the American and British declarations of policy is to call the Japanese bluff at London. From Tokyo a strong delegation has gone to the reconvened naval conference with the obvious purpose of securing legal sanction for Japanese overlordship in the Orient and for the changes military aggression has brought about in the map of China. Naval limitation seems to be regarded as a secondary issue. The need of the hour, from Japan's viewpoint, is a new political arrangement to confirm the gains of the past four years.

Several days ago it was reported that the Tokyo delegation to the naval conference would propose a non-aggression pact between the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan, to supplant the nine-power treaty. This, of course, would give Japan carte blanche to proceed against either China or Russia. At the same time recognition of Manchukuo would be implied in the proposed pledge of each signatory to respect the others' territorial rights in the Pacific. Apparently the Japanese also expect the United States to refrain from fortifying its Pacific islands, in spite of the breakdown of the naval treaties.

The statements now made in Washington and London may be expected to discredit this proposal before it is officially made. The interests of peace and world stability call for orderly revision by all the participants of the existing nine-power treaty, if it is out of date, rather than negotiation of a new one that would confirm an act of sabotage. What is most needed is recognition on the part of Japan that treaties are valid and binding until they have been modified by the mutual consent of the parties. So long as Japan makes a policy of violating agreements tending to thwart her ambitions, negotiations of any sort are futile.

Housing U. S. Agencies.

In view of the serious shortage of office space in the District Secretary Ickes, who is responsible for the housing of Federal agencies, thinks it will be necessary to seek additional accommodation in Baltimore or other nearby cities. Even now District facilities are greatly overtaxed, while the efficiency of Federal employes in many cases has been impaired by assigning them to overcrowded or inconveniently located buildings.

It is to be hoped that the mushroom growth of the Federal bureaucracy will eventually be checked. However, even if supernumerary New Deal agencies and superfluous civil servants are eliminated, various new bureaus may be expected to take their places. Consequently the housing problem confronting Secretary Ickes is not merely a temporary emergency to be met rather casually by transferring the Government's "overflow" to Baltimore or any other city offering suitable quarters at fair rentals. If workers are to be in convenient proximity to their offices and if already congested traffic arteries are to be kept open, the District must call a halt to constant expansion of the bureaucratic agencies within its restricted boundaries.

Permanent quarters may have to be found, therefore, for Government workers crowded out of Washington. But the cities housing any such overflow should be carefully chosen after weighing their advantages as working centers for the particular groups transferred. There should be no haphazard shifting under the pressure of a so-called emergency, but an intelligently planned redistribution of Federal agencies calculated to increase rather than impair the efficiency of the civil service. For instance, a great deal of the work now carried on in Washington by the technical agencies could probably be transacted more easily and more effectively if their employes were in more direct contact with the agricultural, commercial, industrial and financial activities of the people.

If physical dispersion of Government offices really appears to be unavoidable it is an opportune time to consider the advantages of a selective geographical decentralization that will not only relieve local congestion, but also increase the general efficiency of Federal Administration.

Conservative Challenge.

The "platform for American industry" adopted in New York on Thursday is much more than a blasting indictment of loose governmental practices tolerated or encouraged by the New Deal. Essentially it is a closely reasoned, clearly expressed charter of conservative faith which, regardless of criticism which may be directed to particular points, is both refreshing and encouraging in this period of wistful thinking and ardent emotionalizing.

To read the crisp and clear-cut phrases of this notable document is to realize by contrast how woefully the Roosevelt Administration has failed to come to grips with the problems of the day. Where the speeches of the President go in for sweeping generalities, this industrial platform concentrates on hard-hitting precision. Where the New Dealers are customarily evasive or sanctimoniously self-righteous, this ringing statement is to the point and flamingly sincere. By its very honesty it attains a telling literary style which further insures its influence as a contribution to current political discussion.

That the statement is open to exception on several counts is a matter of secondary importance. Its vital achievement is the presentation of a well-formulated philosophy of conservative thought, based partly on thorough knowledge of American history and institutions, and partly on broad familiarity with both economic theory and industrial conditions. There is a biting irony in the fact that these hard-boiled manufacturers have produced a state paper which in the field of scholarship far surpasses many of the "brain trust" utterances.

If the Administration tries to laugh off this challenge, or to depict it as merely a product of reactionary temper, the comeback will be one of complete futility. For so serious an indictment only a serious answer will avail. No unverifiable references to what unnamed bankers are supposed to have said in 1933 will dispose of this attack.

Indeed only one effective defense is possible. The New Deal must make clear, in phrases as direct and unequivocal as those flung at it, just what its own objectives are. It must define a philosophy of liberalism as cogent and convincing as is this tenet of conservative faith. It must go beyond denunciations of past blunders and promises of future successes to show concretely the underlying intention and the fundamental motivation of its program for the welfare of America.

Such a challenge no real liberal or radical would ever hesitate to accept. No statesman worthy of the name has ever refused, under hostile criticism, clearly to set forth his objectives and the means he intends to employ in their attainment. Mr. Roosevelt, therefore, has been given a great opportunity to develop his own political philosophy in a call as clarion clear as that of his conservative opponents. Only a spurious liberalism would be silent or elusive in the face of a manifesto as deeply sincere as the one which has been formulated in New York.

Two Newspapermen.

The coincidence in the deaths of Don Seitz and Arthur Chapman on the same day serves to make doubly clear an angle of American journalism too often obscured. For a variety of reasons, not the least of which stems from Hollywood, it is the common concept that newspapermen wear slouch hats, speak in profane bellows and are, typically, well on the hither side of middle age, with correspondingly callow and superficial attitudes. Of course, a few exceptions are allowed for the more sedentary members of the Fourth Estate.

Don Seitz and Arthur Chapman were both newspapermen. Both held honorable ranks in the journalistic corps. Yet it is safe to assume that few readers ever took particular note of their names. Seitz was an associate of Joseph Pulitzer in the great days of the lamented New York World, where he distinguished himself in the business office although he had previously won his spurs in editorial work. Chapman, last connected with the New York Tribune, was best known for his "Out Where The West Begins," which he pounded out in the routine of filling a daily column and which was widely pirated after its first publication, netting him practically nothing.

But, in addition to their newspaper work, each was otherwise distinguished. Seitz was the author of some thirty books of biography and history, most of them notable for the amount of painstaking research involved in their writing. Chapman was widely known as a foremost authority on the old West, being particularly well informed in matters pertaining to the desperadoes of early pioneer days. Neither was marked by a slouch hat or any trace of vulgarity. On the contrary, each was distinguished for his broad perspective, his multitude of interests, his authoritative culture. That the record may be kept straight, be it said that the school of Seitz and Chapman is happily in the ascendant.

"The financial condition of this country is as solid as bedrock," shouts a political speaker, who may be taking too much for granite.

Two moonshiners recently were sentenced by a Western judge to 30 days on bread and water. They know what to do with the bread, but the water has them puzzled.

Skater's Crusade.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just "turned 15," and I want to start a crusade for better and more ice skating in the District.

The pools at Lincoln Memorial have never proven satisfactory, perhaps because of the weight of the large crowds which use the ice there. But recently there appeared in the press a story of preparations which are being made in a small town in, I believe, western Maryland, for ice skating rinks. The cost appeared to be small.

Briefly, a damp, low-lying piece of ground, nearly level, is to be surrounded by boards of about 8 inches wide, lying horizontally with the edge up, thus making a wall 8 (perhaps it was 10) inches high, and on the inside of this wall, surrounding the low, flat, damp spot, dirt was to be piled against the boards to keep the water from draining out. Then, during a cold spell of weather, water was to be let into the surrounded area. This water will freeze more quickly than the deeper pools. As this likely will be an 8-inch block of ice, it will be more satisfactory than the usual 3 inches in the Memorial pools.

It seems to me that it would be easy to find several such areas and that the cost will be small. Then there is no danger as would be the case if the ice was over a canal or river.

Can't and won't you help me in providing for this winter sport?

Spare Room Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Notwithstanding all the efforts and success of the Administration and of various charities to alleviate the sad conditions that exist everywhere, the fact remains that a large number of people, with the hard winter coming on, will find themselves either in distress or in extremely poor circumstances. And it would be an excellent thing if individuals who can afford to do so would stretch forth their hands and make some effort to help in the manner I desire to suggest.

I do not appeal to the man or woman of ordinary means, who can only just manage, often with a great struggle, to make ends meet. But to the man and woman of means that have more than enough and to spare. One of the great precepts of the Gospel is to "harbor the harborless." There are a great many men and women of this class alluded to who have large houses, and plenty of extra rooms to spare; far more than they need for themselves and their families and servants. These people could, without feeling the sacrifice, make room for the shelter of one poor person who has no place to "lay his head."

Some may remark: "Oh; if I take some man or woman into my house, he or she will probably rob me of my jewels or my money." In answer: they will not, probably, if they are well recommended by responsible persons. The majority of the poor and distressed are not the kind to rob, and when such occurs, it is probably extreme necessity that has made that person yield to the temptation.

Much more likely than not, if a well-to-do man or woman takes a person in need into his home, not only will it be an act of Christian virtue, but the one who does this kind deed will be repaid by useful service given in return for the shelter accorded, and often by learning from that person many qualities and virtues that they never even dreamed of. And we cannot forget the words of One who said "Even a cup of cold water, given in My name shall not lose its reward."

"Campaign Stuff."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I will wager Mr. Roosevelt's reference to his banking advisers with the liberal ideas—their identities mercifully hidden—has his campaign managers shaking their bald knobs and talking into their beards. In his speeches, and I refer not only to his verbal greetings to his Georgia "frands," he never passes up the chance to point the horrible contrast prior to March 4, 1933, versus after that date, when we are to assume greatness assumed robes of state. Mr. Roosevelt is spared the embarrassment of an answer to this query: How he would have handled the mess existing between mid-1929 and the much publicized March 4, 1933, had he been in office.

Anyone but an unthinking boob knows that the banking crisis might have been avoided and recovery speeded had Roosevelt cooperated with Hoover before March 4. His bland refusal of overtures makes a rather unsavory chapter for future historians; this inaction by the proclaimed apostle of action. This premature unleashing of executive greatness in the interests of the forgotten man would have made better campaign stuff than the outworn March, 1933, contrast, at the reiteration of which hearers are beginning to yawn with weariness and disgust. The Liquid Sinews.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read Mr. Livingston Hartley's most interesting article on "Oil and Italy" in The Post of December 4. He discusses the hardships that might accrue to the humble country folk in isolated districts in Italy, who depend upon the operation of buses and trucks, in the event that the supply of gasoline were to be limited or cut off. May I point out that motor type of transportation has been introduced into conservative Italy only comparatively recently.

Therefore, as Mr. Hartley correctly points out, the loud wails about the cruelty of our oil embargo and the suffering thereby visited upon the innocent Italian civil population somehow ring false. It is for military mobility that our gasoline is urgently needed, of course. And curtailment of the "liquid sinews of war" may soon force a speedy cessation of slaughter. A. NEVILLE.

Debt Arithmetic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Those lightning political calculators, who think in trillions, while blithely informing us that our national deficit is relatively less than Britain's, should enlighten the people in regard to the British income tax which swallows up about a fourth of one's income. Evidently we are headed in the same direction, which is not a pleasant prospect.

As a matter of fact and figures the total debt of States, counties and various municipalities, combined with the national debt, approaches the almost incalculable figure of $250,000,000,000.

In view of the foregoing, President Roosevelt's recent optimistic utterance that we are again "in the black," does not impress those of us that have studied arithmetic.

In Defense Of "Ditch Diggers."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a reformed "ditch digger" or civilian employe of the Panama Canal, who served there at intervals from 1905 to 1928, I feel somewhat peeved by the aspersions cast on my one-time fellow workers by your special correspondent, Paul Vanorden Shaw.

Mr. Shaw describes the "ditch digger" as a "stall-fed moron," a "Main streeter," demanding "pampered treatment from a benevolent Uncle Sam," paying "practically nothing for a house far better than he ever had at home," keeping two or more servants and enjoying such unwarranted privileges as untaxed cigarettes and gasoline.

As a matter of fact, the privileges and premiums once granted to employes of the Panama Canal in the days when Americans refused to go there except for high wages and other special inducement have been pretty well whittled away. For quarters, which were once free, they now pay rent. It is true that these rents are low, because they are not padded to include a profit for real estate speculators, but they are sufficient to amortize the costs of the buildings. These latter are far from luxurious. A man who transferred from the department service in Washington expecting, on the strength of Mr. Shaw's assurance, to live in a better house than he ever had at home would be bitterly disappointed.

Servants are about as cheap in the Canal Zone as in the far South. They are underpaid and deserve better wages. But for the present it is true that many "ditch diggers'" wives, who would have to do their own housework if they were living on the same income in Washington, can afford to hire a cook and laundress. This seems to annoy Mr. Shaw, but I can bear it with equanimity.

Even as you and I, the "ditch digger" prefers that his cigarettes and gasoline should be tax-free. If his own Government should decide to impose a stiff sales tax on these commodities, he would submit without too much grumbling, but he sees no reason why Panama should be allowed to tax him.

This "stall-fed moron" is the same fellow who built the Panama Canal and has operated it for 20 years. Under George W. Goethals he played his part in the best disciplined and most efficient organization of modern times. The old spirit is still alive down there, and efficiency is nearly if not quite as high as in construction days.

Mr. Shaw deplores the "ditch digger's" belief that he is a better man than his Panamanian brother. I admit that in the interest of international comity he should refrain from obtruding this conviction offensively, but, if he did not feel it, he would be an even more hopeless moron than he appears to Mr. Shaw.

Many Happy Returns!

Post Office, Saturday.

EDUCATIONAL NOTICE: Tomorrow evening, Georgetown's sophomores will undergo a public examination—in Horace. On Monday, before the District's Italy-America Society, Dr. Lester K. Born, of George Washington University, will deliver an address—on Horace. All next week, the classical classes of the Catholic University will celebrate—Horace.—Add Class. Ads, de7.

"Eheu, fugaces labuntur anni"—or, as John Clark translates it, "Alas, the years ought to be pinched for speeding!" (Horace Odes II, 14:1).

Because—although the telegraph companies haven't issued any "special greeting-forms" to meet the occasion—Quintus Horatius Flaccus was born at Venusia on December 8, B. C. 65. And the scholars above mentioned are observing the 2,000th anniversary of this Latin poet's birth.

What especially interests us just now in Horace are the parallels between his times and modern Italy's, between him at Rome and most of the political population of Washington, between him and all literary folk—even, with your permission, columnists.

In 65 B. C. Aedile Julius Caesar, the Mussolini of his day, was paving the road to his dictatorship, while Pompey, the de Bono, fought Rome's Eastern wars. But Cicero was discussed as consular timber, Lucretius had reached the height of his popularity, 5-year-old Virgil was playing over a farm in the valley of the Po. It was the right time for Horace to be born, nor was he late for the appointment.

The father, a former slave, soon became a widower, with this sole child: "I owe everything to my father, who, though poor on his starveling farm, wouldn't send me to the (local) school, but boldly took the boy to Rome"—to be educated with the best. Athens followed: the young liberal volunteered under Brutus, commanded a cohort. Philippi, however, followed Athens: the young conservative saw in imperialism "hope for stability," so Leon Josiah Richardson puts it, "and a social order ruled by the finer aims of life."

Possibly there is a Horace being born today on the banks of the modern Ofanto. But is there a Brutus in the Fascist Grand Council?

Though it was to his father that Horace owed his education, it was to Maecenas that the poet owed his Sabine farm. And of what the world owes to that farm the world is well aware:

"This is what I prayed for," wrote Horace: "a piece of land not very large, where there would be a garden, and near the house a spring of everflowing water, and above these a bit of woodland." And, from the capital: "O rural home! When shall I see thee? When shall I be able . . . to drink sweet forgetfulness of life's cares?"

There is no Congressman or columnist who hasn't orated or printed such sentiments in Washington—the sole difference between the utterers being that the columnists mean what they say.

The only dark ages of the Horatian influence were the Middle Ages. In all others, Horace has been everything to every writer that (for all Horace's criticism of Plautus) Plautus was to the thought of Horace, Terence to his touch. The Satires and Epistles were first translated into English in 1567, the Odes not until after Shakespeare's death. But Chaucer seems to have known his Horace; Spenser knew him; he was assimilated by Milton, Dryden, Cowley, Pope—not to mention Rosnard across the Channel, Opitz beyond the Rhine.

"I have built a monument more enduring than bronze, and loftier than the . . . pyramids," boasted Horace. Said Shakespeare:

"Not marble, not the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme."

Dr. Richardson, in his "Quintus Horatius Flaccus," has collected some dozen similar debts to Horace owed by the man of Avon.

No use to tell the Post-Impressionist that Horace isn't read any more. You read him without knowing it. Indeed, in these dishonest days—when Tin Pan Alley picks Donizetti's pockets and Timothy Cole's studs aren't worth a moment's purchase in Palette Mews—it is only the columnists who have been more frank than Shakespeare about their Horatian borrowings. Eugene Field's paraphrases were made for his Chicago column; the translations and adaptations by F. P. A. have graced, these many years—if too infrequently—his Conning Tower. Thus

". . . on strong wing, through upper air,
Two worlds beneath, the old and new,
The Roman swan is wafted where
The Roman eagles never flew."

Nevertheless, as we remarked last summer, we should like to be sure that the classicists haven't made a mathematical blunder about their date. If Horace was born in 65 B. C. is 1935 the 2000th anniversary of his birth?

Fair Enough

A Punch At England.

Rome, Dec. 6.

AT 1 o'clock on my first day in Rome I went down to the grill to meet the manager of the Ambassador Hotel. His name is Frederico Rota, and he holds the title of Commendatore—something of which we have no equivalent in America. It means, however, that the man has received a nod from the government. Connie Mack would be a Commendatore in the United States.

His wife is an American, of Philadelphia, and they are friends of the Gene Tunneys and the Barney Gimbels. In fact, it was Commendatore Rota who managed the social festivities at Tunney's wedding in Rome. He has toured the United States more extensively than most traveling drummers of the present class whose cruising radius is narrowly restricted, and he knows the geography of the country better than 90 per cent of Americans.

About 12 years ago he went over as a member of a party of European hotel magnates and was present in the Copley Plaza in Boston at the dinner at which the orchestra played as a compliment to the Italian delegation, thinking it was their national anthem, the "Finiculi, Finicula," Neapolitan song about the young fellow who took his girl out on a Sunday afternoon, and for lack of the price of a bottle of wine and a sandwich took her riding up Vesuvius on the roller coaster railway.

The orchestra had played "God Save the King" for the English and "Marseillaise" for the Frenchmen, and when they played "Finiculi, Finicula" that was equivalent to playing "Alexander's Ragtime Band" as the American national anthem.

• • • •

FOR the group at the table there was a crate of bathtub scotch which was being kept out of sight in deference to the eighteenth amendment. With each hand Mr. Rota grabbed a quart by the neck and came up using them like Indian clubs to beat time and sang the true anthem of Italy amid cheers and to the consternation of his hosts.

He was pretty cross about it, but at that he shouldn't have been, for there was an occasion at the long convention of Democrats in Madison Square Garden at the height of the Ku Klux Klan foolishness when a Tammany orchestra, meaning no harm whatever, drove Southern delegates wild by playing as a complimentary piece not their sacred "Dixie" but "Marching Through Georgia."

The Commendatore is not sore any more, but he says that, thanks to Mussolini and the new deal of the last 13 years in Italy, the Italian national anthem is well known throughout the civilized world, although, to be quite honest, I do not know the name of it myself and recognize it only by ear.

And still I think that "Finiculi, Finicula" is an expressive Italian song and one of the gayest ever written, even though a German composed it. I think "Alexander's Ragtime Band" is a good song, too, and more in the American spirit than "The Star-Spangled Banner," and that George M. Cohan's "Over There" is the most magnificent piece of America bombast ever written and, with its honest boastfulness, the most characteristic American song to European ears.

That boastfulness which formerly was associated with the American character has now become cringing timidity by comparison with the spirit of Italians who think they are the lions of the human race today and of Germans who knock off work several times a day to beat their chests, glower at themselves in their looking-glasses and bellow their challenge to the whole wide world.

• • • •

MEANWHILE the Japanese, saying little, just proceed to take over everything that isn't nailed down and to prepare for the impending battle with the white race for world supremacy. This should be a pushover for the Japanese and their subordinate yellow races if they bide their time, because if they let nature take her course white people will tear their own hearts out in grubby squabbles over trifles. The Italians are going to start it off in a short time by taking a punch at England.

Mr. Hawley is a bureau manager in Rome now and an international journalist of long seniority. He told me that the big building across the street from Commendatore Rota's hotel was the American Embassy, and somebody else told me that another big building across the street was the former palace of the late mother of the Italian King, now used as an office building for the government. When the old lady died they retired the palace from palatial duty and put it to work. They did the same with some of the old palaces in Russia and with the McLean palace in Washington, but in Madrid they put turnstiles at the doors and gained a few dollars.

• • • •

EVERY Italian declares with a finality which makes it reckless to enter into a logical discussion that Mussolini is the greatest man in the world today and one of the greatest the human race has ever produced.

I hope that as long as I remain in Italy I will have the self-control to abstain from logical discussion.

Valley Forge Crisis

By Eugene Pharo,

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

SO firmly entrenched is the tradition of Washington's barefoot army starving at Valley Forge that a recent proposal to make it easy and economical for tourists to eat while visiting the site, has caused considerable disturbance among Pennsylvania's patriotic societies.

The issue has been further complicated by the patent slight that those not associated with patriotic societies consider the current dispute has thrown upon that succulent symbol of gastronomic democracy, the svelt and toothsome hot dog, which, under aliases ranging from "torrid pup" to "red hots," "weenies," "doggies," and sometimes "frankfurter" or "wiener," consistently has represented to the hungry twentieth century American surcease from immediate discomfort, if not a passport into Elysium.

Apparently simple in its origin, the question whether a couple of neat log cabins should be permitted at Valley Forge, in which wiener sandwiches (with mustard, or piccalilli, or kraut) and soft drinks, might be sold, or whether the park property should remain entirely devoid of refreshment stands, has resulted in a contest that seems to have vast sociological implications.

To some the issue is still simple, though significant. For them it resolves itself into a war, in which the embattled hot dog will win, or will not win. They pin their faith on the essential Americanism of the inert canine, and defy all objectors to do their worst. Peculiar sneers, free-hand abuse, jeers, insulting gestures, and an occasional dietary dithyramb couched in the vocabulary of a circus barker, serve them as weapons. Love democracy, they say—love its hot dog.

• • • •

THE contrary faction is guilty of time-serving in that they do not directly attack the dog. They indicate their loyalty to it by putting it on, instead of eating it. Valley Forge Park, they maintain, is a locality in which those with a truly reverent regard for Washington's wintry sacrifice, will indicate it in the former fashion, and will refrain from partaking of it. Doggedly maintaining their attitude, they will be, so to speak, doggoned if they will yield to a vulgar appetite for food of any kind while in the presence of the ghosts of our brave Colonials. Rather than do that, they will stay away from the park altogether—as most of them do, except on such occasions as, previously filled with good food and smooth liquor, they sally forth in motorcades to lay a wreath or to listen to an address.

Being comfortably fixed themselves, these patriots are not inclined to worry about the hunger of a man from Texas or California who may achieve the spot at lunchtime, tired, hungry and thirsty and devoid of means of satisfying his appetite economically and expeditiously; not to mention the discomfort of such progeny as he and his wife may bring with them and who may be totally unacquainted with the history of geographical location while suffering pangs in an anatomical one.

The fact that there is one spot, not on the park property itself, but virtually surrounded by it, where soft drinks, frankfurters, or even full course dinners can be bought at emergency prices, is not considered by everyone to answer the question. It is considered, instead, to lend not a little to the essential complexity, by introducing plutocratic values into an issue sufficiently complicated by patriotico-esthetic ones. This one element, indeed, is considered by some as likely to start, right at Valley Forge, such a flare-up of class consciousness as to put completely into the shade the Russian Revolution (if I may be permitted to refer to an event scholastically so negligible.)

THINGS have come to a pretty pass, lovers of the people aver, when free-born Americans are required to travel back a couple of miles from the entrenchments to get a hot dog, and are then required to pay for it 10 cents instead of the customary 5—and such little doggies as they are! Are the masses to starve, even when there isn't any revolution on? If they are, such objectors seem inclined to believe a revolution should be provided along with the starvation.

There seems to be a growing impression, at least in the vicinity of Philadelphia, and among these critics, that truly patriotic shrines, or parks of any kind, are not intended for the general public; but are to be preserved only for the complete enjoyment of the first families. Recently it has been pointed out that while Fairmont Park, in the city limits of Philadelphia and fully 20 miles from Valley Forge, is amply provided with bridle paths, and with an art museum costing millions, it has an inadequate number of baseball diamonds and comfort stations. The current confusion over Valley Forge is held to reveal the same attitude on the part of the austerely patriotic.

Solicitous Pennsylvanians are afraid the camping ground will be converted into a Coney Island if it is made pleasant for persons to visit Valley Forge, in spite of the fact that there are there no Ferris wheels, or roller coasters, and no place for a boardwalk. They do not want life there to be too abundant.

• • • •

AMONG the societies that have taken this attitude, at least according to various officers who have spoken on their behalf, are the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Order of Independent Americans, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Legion, and the Patriotic Order of Sons of America. Those who have taken a favorable attitude toward permitting construction and use of refreshment cabins, include, in addition to a large number of ordinary citizens, officers of the State, who are somewhat influenced by the prospect of resultant revenues that can be used for park upkeep, as well as for paying the wages of those who are employed to make banana skins and shoe-box lunch containers disappear. Thomas C. Buchanan, State Secretary of Forests and Waters, has been quoted as quite in favor of making eating easy in the park, and some members of the park commission do not seem reluctant to permit it.

At present the distinguished men and women, including famous horsebreeders, World War generals, educators, and financiers, who compose the commission, are lying somewhat low. They held a meeting on the day before Thanksgiving, in order to settle the dispute once for all; but actually left the question hanging in the air—perhaps so that they would be able to preserve a sufficiently thankful mood on the day following.

One alert reporter, associating an amiable smile and an apparent oral slip on the part of Commissioner Maj. Gen. Edward C. Shannon, of Columbia, following the session, argued that the hot dog would eventually win.

"We will give you," Gen. Shannon said, in answer to a request for a drawing of one of the hot dog cabins, "all the copies you want, when the cabins are built."

• • • •

AN entirely objective observer would have considered that sentence enigmatic beyond all solution, but the reporter, being on the side of the people, and from a distinctly New Deal sheet, found it difficult to refrain from grabbing at the hope that it seemed, to him, to hold forth.

At present all discussion of the subject is seasoned with plenty of mustard: it finds Fascists, anti-Fascists, Communists, Democrats, Republicans, Socialists, and flag-wavers each sharpening their own specific attitudes on some part of the sizzling, tight-skinned, and possibly Valley Forgean sausage.

The Rackets Remain

THE second anniversary of repeal passed off with no incidents of national significance, although a few minor domestic tragedies were reported here and there the next morning by certain rugged individualists, who had attempted, the evening before, to recapture the exuberance, which had overcome the populace on that fateful day in 1933. No half-holiday was declared, there was no bunting displayed, and a careful search in the columns of the public press failed to reveal the staging of any parades by organizations usually ready to celebrate in uniform without one-half the excuse that was theirs on Thursday last.

The plain truth of the matter is that the great American public, no longer treated like children, has learned to take it or leave it alone, although it still prefers on the whole to take it. But no longer faced with the necessity of carrying flasks, telling a tough looking mug that he must remember me, I was here with Joe Whoosis, or slipping into the men's room for a nip that generally half-emptied the pint, the average man has sort of lost interest in drinking just for the principle of the thing. Out in St. Louis, it is true, a few of the old guard spoke dolefully about the liquor evil and offered the usual resolution asking the President to abolish "the use of intoxicants at White House functions," a use, I am reliably informed, hardly on a par with what went on in that mansion in bygone days.

• • • •

SO CALMLY did the whole affair go, capturing only about half a column on the inside pages, that it must be apparent to everybody that liquor is no longer what the politicians would call a paramount issue. The Eskimos in Alaska were reported starting a campaign for the return of Prohibition, but Eskimos were never noted for their ability to forego the white man's poison and it is doubtful if the Nome reform movement will cause any apprehension in the Land of the Free. The fact is that there are so many other important issues at loose that Prohibition can hardly be made into one for the coming campaigns, except perhaps in the seven lone States where liquor is still legally outside the pale.

One of the things that griped a populace which, on the whole, believes in fair play, was the brutality and ruthlessness displayed during prohibition by the officers of the law. The public sympathy lay almost always with the alleged law breakers. Here and there, if you recall, indignation meetings were held in protest of the governmental gunfire, as in the famous "Black Duck" incident, for example.

• • • •

TODAY a bootlegger could be chucked into jail for life and nobody would care, except perhaps his wife and children and possibly his poor old mother. For a bootlegger now is universally regarded as a cheat and not as the public benefactor he was once made to seem. The sympathy of the populace has gone back where it belongs, to the arm of the law. Children no longer worship the public enemies; so little, in fact, that James Cagney, who depicted them so faithfully on the screen, has been forced into a Shakespearean role, and Edward Robinson, of "Little Caesar" fame, no longer dies behind billboards amid the stamping of feet and the shrill Saturday cries of children in the neighborhood movie palaces.

Thus repeal has brought a certain sanity back, as well as a certain decency, which more than makes up for the phoney benefits that the Scott McBrides and Bishops Cannon tried in vain to tell us had come with the great drought, which was in reality the great flood. Deaths from poisoned liquor are few and far between and other reforms have taken place for which to be thankful. But despite all this there is one heritage from the old days which must be placed squarely at the doors of the Anti-Saloon League, and for which we are none of us grateful.

• • • •

RACKETS, of the most vicious kind, still thrive. Every city knows them, even the National Capital, and they are conducted upon big-business methods learned by the punks of the underworld, who were taught in the prohibition school, when they were young and defiance of a nasty law was all the rage. The gangsters, who once were corner toughs are now tuxedoed and patent-leathered "business men" of a most efficient type. They no longer run booze, but they live by terrorization, and are protected by magnificently built up organizations of predatory power in every city of the land.

For these enemies we have to thank blue-nosed ladies and gentlemen, who met the other day in St. Louis to pray for prohibition's return. I hope they are proud of what they have done for their country, for it's plenty. If you naively think it isn't, may I suggest that you read, in Current History, the account of the racket man's power as written by Meyer Berger, police reporter for the unsensational and wholly respectable New York Times? It will be an eye-opener to the innocent, who don't get around very much.

Young G. O. P. to Meet.

Anthracite Workers Demand 30-Hour Week and Pay Raise

100,000 Unionized Miners Represented in Plea at Parley Here.

Delegates representing America's 100,000 unionized anthracite miners, meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel, adopted a report of their scale committee recommending their representatives to negotiate for a new contract including a 30-hour work week and "substantial increase" of all wage scales.

The present union contract with anthracite operators was made in 1931 and expires March 31, 1936. Union miners in the bituminous coal industry are at present operating under a 35-hour week. They agreed to the 35-hour week after negotiations following their demand for 30 hours. The committee also demanded "abolition of the practice of operators leasing coal lands for individual operation, and of contracting for ordinary colliery work."

The scale committee's instructions to delegates who will represent the anthracite miners in their negotiations with operators are voluminous, and include demands for overtime pay, safety appliances, and abolition of many existing practices. The negotiators will be guided rather than bound by this report.

Bootleg Coal Hit.

The convention also adopted a resolution condemning sub-leasing of coal company lands to other operators. This resolution deplores the proportions reached by the bootleg anthracite industry, but adds that it was "created by idleness."

Miners hold the depression has attacked their earning powers—seemingly stabilized by the 1931 wage agreement—from two sources. First, they charge coal companies have leased coal lands to companies not bound by the union wage agreement.

Secondly, unemployed coal miners, many of them union members, have been bootlegging coal from shallow shafts illegally sunk in coal companies' lands. This bootleg industry now accounts for 5,000,000 tons per year, almost 10 per cent of the legitimately produced anthracite.

Every ton of coal produced by nonunion mines or from bootleg sources theoretically displaces a ton, which would have been mined by union miners under the 1931 wage scale. While union miners deplore the existence of the bootleg industry, they have much sympathy with the bootleggers, who often are idle members of the union, reduced to earnings of $1 and $2 a day, as opposed to $5.60, a rough average of the 1931 scale.

Protracted Negotiations.

Negotiations with anthracite operators for a new agreement are expected to be protracted. Since United Mine Workers is an industrial union, the delegates to the conference will represent 47 classifications of workers, each with its separate scale and regulations governing safety and working conditions.

The miners' scale committee recommends negotiation of a contract for only two years to replace the present four-year agreement. The present tri-district convention comprises United Mine Workers districts Nos. 1, 7 and 9, all in Pennsylvania, and includes all the anthracite-producing area of the United States.

Tri-district conventions are held only in anticipation of new negotiations on contracts. The last one was held in 1930. This year's three-day session adjourned yesterday.

Meanwhile, the National Bituminous Coal Commission, announced that Commissioner George Edward Acret had been assigned to supervise an investigation of the effect of importation and exportation of coal on the domestic market. Union miners recently complained to President Roosevelt of increased importation of hard coal from the Soviet Union.

$400,000 Willed For School Fund

Court Approves Education Trust Left by Lalor.

Willard A. Lalor, one time railroad executive, provided for the establishment of a $400,000 educational endowment to be known as "The Lalor Foundation, Inc.," it was shown yesterday in the District Supreme Court, when Justice F. D. Letts approved the endowment.

In his will, which disposed of over $3,000,000, Lalor asked that $100,000 be given to the "Anna Lalor Scholarship Fund," and that $300,000 be given to the "Lalor Research Scholarship." Both funds were to be paid to educational institutions to be designated by his sister, Mrs. Ann Lalor Burdick, and a nephew, Charles Lalor Burdick, of Delaware.

They asked that Justice Letts designate which nonprofit organizations should administer the funds, and he directed that the money be turned over to the "Lalor Foundation," which was asked to carry out the wishes of the late Mr. Lalor.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

They're in Again.

Brokers everywhere report that since the upward movement in stocks got into full swing Oscar ("Puddinhead") Public is leaping into action with his proverbial passion for dancing in the dark.

• • • •

He still thinks it's more fun playing blindfolded, and the only three facts he wants are:

(1) Am I late?
(2) What do you like today?
(3) How quick can I get aboard?

• • • •

Occasionally he supplements these queries with a frenzied "Why didn't somebody tell me about this before?" and "Do you think I'll be rich by early spring?" But even then he prefers a quick answer to anything that looks too much like a statement of facts.

• • • •

All experience with the approximately human race has shown that when stocks are a dime a barrel the investor may want to see all the books and papers, but that when they have reached the stratosphere he has no time for fundamentals.

• • • •

It is in the bull markets that the plaintive query, "Can I be wrong?" is drowned out in a reverberating "Gangway!"

• • • •

Facts! Why, when the market really gets to the boiling point you can make the average man sore by giving him the correct way to spell the name of the stock.

• • • •

His theme song is "Dancing Tip to Tip," and nothing pains him as much as the statistical clerk coming on with a big hunch of corporation statements and suggestions that he find out where he is going.

• • • •

It's an old American custom.

• • • •

The panic of 1929 may have made him a little more particular about knowing whether it's a Chinese or native security, and whether it sells peacock feathers, glass door knobs or locomotives, but he still thinks the main point is to get in during the fire instead of after the water damage.

• • • •

All of which is very discouraging. The SEC has made the corporations open their books. The brokers have collected all the facts. But the congenital stock market player is in too much of a hurry to be bothered.

• • • •

But she is country bred—with lots of crust. ZEV GRAHAM.

From Colgate comes the announcement that workers are more efficient with their feet on desks. It makes the blood rush to their heads and increases their pep. It's amazing how many of us have had this idea all our lives.

It must make a Democrat feel pretty guilty these days if he by any chance belongs to a club that has a good heating system and is more than 30 per cent stocked.

Dr. Veverka May Resign HisPostHere

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Changes of government in Europe frequently make changes in Washington's Diplomatic Corps. The most imminent one, although it is not yet a certainty, would affect the Minister of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Ferdinand Veverka.

Next Thursday Czechoslovakia's President, Thomas G. Masaryk, will resign, to be succeeded by Dr. Edouard Benes, Minister of Foreign Affairs. President Masaryk, who has held the office for 15 years, was 85 years old last March, and is resigning because of age. Elected in 1920, he was re-elected for the fourth time in May, 1934, for seven years, the constitutional limit of two successive terms having been waived.

President Masaryk has headed the government of his country since the autumn of 1918, having issued from Washington a declaration of independence for Czechoslovakia on October 14 of that year. Two weeks later, as the Hapsburg empire crumbled, a national committee took over the government and Masaryk returned to become its first President.

Dr. Veverka, who has been in Washington since 1928, left recently for his home in Prague. It has been rumored he will not return to Washington, but will be appointed either Minister to London or to a cabinet seat. However, he will be back, if only for a short time, and during his absence Dr. Josef Nemecek, Counselor of the Legation, is Charge d'Affaires.

The Minister and his family have been very popular members of Capital society during their stay, and Mme. Veverka and their daughter, Miss Nella Veverka, who stayed in Prague this season, have been greatly missed. The legation on Massachusetts avenue has been the scene of many brilliant functions during their regime.

Their daughter made her debut here two seasons ago and in Prague last winter, remaining abroad with her mother until late spring.

Miss Stuart Is Bride of Daniel Dent

Reception at Gadsby Tavern Follows Ceremony.

Old Christ Church, in Alexandria, was the scene of the wedding of Miss Dorothy du Val Stuart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Stuart, of Washington and New York, and Mr. Daniel Miller Dent, of Philadelphia, last night at 8 o'clock. Mr. Dent is the son of Mrs. James Robertson Miller Dent and the late Mr. Elbert Dent, of Maryland and Washington.

It was particularly fitting that the wedding should take place in Old Christ Church, as Miss Stuart's grandparents were married there in 1876.

The Stuart family occupied the Washington pew for many years, and has been associated with the church since Colonial days. The reception followed in Gadsby Tavern, where George Washington led the minuet with Sally Fairfax in Revolutionary times. This is the first reception held at the tavern and will probably be the last in this historic place which is now being used as a museum.

Miss Stuart's great-grandfather was Justice Gabriel du Val, of the United States Supreme Court, and another great-grandfather was George de Neal, a personal friend and attorney of Gen. Washington.

Bride Wears White Velvet.

The bride was gowned in white velvet with a squared neck. The train swept from the waist under a veil of point d'alencon lace which had been worn by Miss Stuart's grandmother. She carried an armful of calla lilies.

The maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth Stuart, a sister of the bride, wore fuchsia moire, and carried Joanna Hill roses. The bridesmaids were gowned in Madonna blue and carried pink roses. The gowns were ornamented by pearl and crystal clips, a gift from the bride and the costume was completed by small pearl Juliet caps. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Louis Jeffries and Mrs. Wheeler McDougall, of Washington; Miss Elizabeth Wheeler and Miss Charlotte Hardie, of New Orleans; Miss Catherine Breed, of New York, and Miss Elizabeth Morris, of Richmond.

Two flower girls, Patricia Stuart and Janine Daudon, a niece of the bridegroom, attended the bride. They wore frocks of shell-pink taffeta, the full skirt of which touched the ground. Their hair was wreathed with sweetheart roses. They carried baskets of rose leaves which were strewn in the path of the bride.

Couple Going to Bermuda.

Mrs. Charles E. Stuart, grandmother of the bride, was gowned in lavender and wore a corsage of sweetheart roses. The mother of the bride was in ice blue satin and wore spray orchids. Mrs. Dent wore purple velvet and a corsage of orchids.

The young couple will spend two weeks in Bermuda, and upon their return will make their home in New York.

Among the members of diplomatic and official circles who attended the wedding were Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and the Counselor of the Embassy, Mr. Boris E. Skvirsky, and Mme. Skvirsky; the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy, Mr. Henry Frank Heywood, and Mrs. Heywood; the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. R. Walton Moore; the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, Col. and Mrs. Beatty Moore, Col. and Mrs. W. P. Upshur, Mr. and Mrs. George N. DO YOU FAVOR IMMEDIATE CASH PAYMENT OF THE SOLDIERS' BONUS?

UNDOUBTEDLY one of the first major issues to be faced by Congress when it assembles in January will be the soldiers' bonus.

INDIVIDUAL men prominent in national affairs have stated their position on this question. The American Legion has gone on record time after time. Congress has frequently voted on various phases of the problem. But no one knows how the people of America feel. No one knows what they want done.

THE AMERICAN Institute of Public Opinion has just completed a nation-wide scientific poll on this question. An impartial and scientifically accurate report of the result will be made in

Ultra Stylish Raincoat Made Of New Fabric

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ATTENTION, gentlemen! If you're in the market for a raincoat then hie yourselves to a certain local shop and see the smart bakelite models displayed there.

Talk about durability, wearability, sturdiness and whatnot, but here's a coat that has them all and a lot more besides. It's waterproof, will not crack, chip or peel, and is not harmed even if you fold it up and put it away when wet. Gasoline, mineral oil, salt water, dry ice, and alcohol have no effect on it. It may be washed and ironed without harm to the fabric.

This little waterbuck weighs only 22 ounces. It's soft and supple and a 12-month item, being suited to spring, summer, fall and winter.

You'd hardly expect one raincoat to have any more good points, but this one scores again, because it's ultra styled, and reinforced at important points.

It comes in two styles, single and double breasted, and in a variety of colors.

Long Scarfs With Sleeves.

THE SHOULDERETTES in a local store speak eloquently for themselves. They are long scarfs with sleeves! They are knitted from some soft, fluffy wool that has a look of warmth about it.

Draped over your shoulders, and fitted over your arms, these dainty little warmers will serve as scarf, sweater, and bedjacket all in one.

Novel Powder Containers.

KNOWN AS "POWDERETTES" are the two gypsy dolls gracing the counter of an F street store. Hidden beneath the voluminous folds of their crepe paper costumes are small talcum powder containers.

When it comes to looking around for gay, novel gifts or prizes, the gypsy couple fill the bill! They're as serviceable as they're ornamental—and they're refreshingly different. Fifty cents for the pair.

Dried Blossoms.

THOSE who want to give the fragrance of an old English garden to the dresser drawer should seek the assistance of some sachet shown in an F street store. It is made up of thousands of dried blossoms and herbs. You buy it in small cellophane packages which you may use in any way your fancy pleases.

Some people love to pour the blooms and leaves into rose jars to scent an entire room.

Inexpensive Ivy Bowls.

MANY BUDGETEERS find that cut flowers are expensive luxuries during the winter months. Realizing, however, that empty vases have a forlorn look, they turn to ivy and other sorts of greenery to brighten up their rooms.

One local store is showing a perfect ivy bowl. It comes in an attractive wrought-iron stand with a large oval handle over which you can train the vine to grow. The bowl itself is round and full and in clear crystal or red glass.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

MAYBE your young son isn't such a destructive little gangster as he seems when he tromps through your French living room or gets tangled up with the lace on your dressing table. Maybe he just doesn't have the kind of a room where he can bring his gang and be comfortable in his own rough and tumble way.

Here is a room that one understanding mother gave her 11-year-old son. The floors she had covered in linoleum of old-time wide plank pattern and the walls she also had covered in linoleum but in a sunny yellow-to-peach tone that could be cleaned like the kitchen floor. She got a wide sturdy maple trestle table with a chair to match for study and a maple chest with a hanging mirror to go over it. Then for his bed she had a frame made for a good box spring and mattress and got her husband to make posts and a tester of 1x3-inch pine boards. All this she painted blue-green and added a bedspread of checked gingham (that would bear plenty of sitting on) and a pleat of the same gingham for the tester. The canopy of the bed she made of white bleached muslin appliqued with his school emblem . . . then got all his friends to sign with India ink. This she fastened over the tester frame with thumb tacks, and you may be sure her son thought it was very grand. For the chairs and curtains of the room she used plain blue-green material—all in all the room could take all the punishment one little boy could give it.

Girls Capable of Better Work In Offices or Professions If They Leave Family Home

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

THE QUESTION of why girls leave home, which was a burning issue a generation ago, now bids fair to appear in the version, "Why don't girls leave home?" Miss Elizabeth Curtis, social director of the Barbizon Hotel, New York, and vocational adviser to young women, has said in a recent interview something that needed to be said long ago—no matter how much it might shock fond mothers. It is that the girl who is in earnest about her business or professional career should cut loose from all family encroachments that interfere with her ability to concentrate on her job.

* * * *

Women who go to their offices thinking of the dinners they must get or the visiting relatives they must entertain to please mother" are only about one-half on the job, Miss Curtis points out. She intimates that not only realtives but the kitchen sink, "duty entertainments" and a good many other outside details should be eliminated from the working woman's life.

* * * *

Undoubtedly it is about time that women—if they hope to remain in the business world—were removing some of the traditional millstones from their necks. And the greatest of these is "the family." In spite of all the freedom given young people of today the idea still too widely exists that a girl beginning her business or professional career should get a job in her home town if possible and live at home. And as for the matter of a self-supporting business woman setting up a separate establishment from her family—well that is still likely to cause a parental hullaballoo, to say nothing of the neighbors' gossip.

THE CASE of Edith Maxwell, mountain girl, recently given 25 years in the penitentiary for killing her father when she was defending herself from his beating, illustrates this traditional attitude. Earl Maxwell, the brother, got out of Pound, Va., and became a traveling salesman. He wanted Edith, who had become a school teacher, to leave. But the mother "couldn't bear to give Edith up." She wanted her to "work near home."

* * * *

Mrs. Maxwell's attitude is typical of that of many mothers in communities more enlightened than Pound. And while most girls who "work near home," do not experience the parental treatment Edith did, they are likely to suffer from the other extreme, to be so smothered in family care and affection they lose their initiative and fail to develop as individual entities.

* * * *

However, the worst feature the employed girl encompassed by too many family ties faces is the encroachment on her time and strength of petty duties. She must if she lives at home, adapt herself to the family schedules, the family guests, the family viewpoint. And while a certain amount of social adjustment and self-sacrifice are necessary throughout life, yet this can be carried so far as to cause too great a scattering of forces, to make the individual too inept to aid best those whom she would serve.

BUT FAMILY LIFE is not the only feminine hangover that handicapes women in business. Cooking is another. Someway the feeling that any woman, no matter how demanding her job, must run a little kitchenette as a sideline will not down. Neither will the idea that she should dine with the Smiths or entertain the Browns or go to this tea or that club meeting—no matter how futile and tiresome such activities may be.

* * * *

The outside pleasure as well as the outside duty if carried to extremes may, of course, likewise impair an employed woman's efficiency. Certainly the cocktail party that leaves its participant incompetent for her tasks the next day is even less to be condoned than the entertainment of relatives or the absorption in club committees. Nor is any woman expected to be a hermit because she holds a job. The point Miss Curtis has made is that employed women had better spend their leisure in sports, culture, self-development and reasonable recreation than in too many petty household or piffling social duties.

* * * *

Many executives who deal with women voice the complaint that their employes have too many irons in the fire and drag their outside affairs too much into the office. They have too much family life, too much cooking and mending, too much club and society puttering. One of the big problems the employed women faces today is to strike a better balance between her personal and business affairs. And in many cases she may have to leave home to do it.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have a number of nice pieces of fancy work which I love to make and some oriental articles I would like to sell. But I do not know how to meet those who might be interested in buying such things. It would be very charitable work if someone would help those who are willing to help themselves, by helping them to display such articles for sale. I am past middle age and not strong any more, which makes it hard to get along all alone. I trust I have made my idea clear to you and would appreciate any suggestions. Very truly yours,

MRS. MARY L.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a student at American University and am endeavoring to work my way through. I am helping in a family for my room and board but it is necessary as well for me to earn part of my tuition.

I paint a new type of picture called "royal glass picture" and I had quite a sale for such pictures at home. I started painting them just as a hobby but friends came into my home and saw them and asked if I would make one for them. In that way I started selling them, developing quite a demand. I would like to find a market here but don't know how to go about it. Have you any suggestions as to haw I could introduce them? Sincerely,

SHIRLEY B.

DEAR MRS. MARY L. and SHIRLEY B.: The reply given "Quilter" in this column Thursday, November 28, applies equally well to your respective letters. To her I said: "The Gentlewoman's League at No. 1 Dupont Circle has acted for over 30 years as a sort of philanthropic middleman for women who have food, needlework and other products of the household arts to sell. Mrs. M. W. Drinkard is manager of the exchange, which is supervised by a board of 20 directors, of which Mrs. Webster Ballinger is president. I suggest you visit or telephone the exchange (the number is POtomac 2663) and ask Mrs. Drinkard's advice about merchandising your handiwork.

If there are other local mediums for merchandising such wares as you have to offer, I do not happen to know of them. Perhaps our readers have valuable suggestions to offer. If so, I should be glad to hear from them. M. H.

Curious About Old Book.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have in my posession a very old book in good condition and I would like to know where I could write to find out if there is any value to it and where I might sell it. Hoping to have your answer soon, I am, sincerely yours,

MRS. G. L. H.

Smart Dresser

MISS GWILI ANDRE.

Models Called Best Dressed Women in U.S.

THE WOMAN who would learn the knack of wearing clothes should study—not society women—but professional models, says Arthur O'Neill, New York photographer of pulchritude.

O'Neill and Robert Powers, who conducts a clearing house for models' services, have picked eleven models as America's best dressed women. These, they maintain, are more representative of American chic than the society women recently named on best-dressed lists.

"Flick the pages of any periodical," O'Neill told The Associated Press, "and you'll find the best dressed and most beautiful women in America. They possess beauty and clothes sense, personality and poise."

"Society women cannot hold a candle to professional models when it comes to dress," Powers said.

The list compiled by O'Neill and Powers is headed by Gwili Andre, formerly of Denmark, considered by many experts America's No. 1 model. Miss Andre is characterized as one who can wear evening clothes "with breathtaking effect." One Washington girl, Anita Counihan, whose picture is often seen on magazine covers, is on the list.

The others are Betty Wyman, expert holder of cigarettes; Frances Joyce, the sophisticated type and perfect 14; Janice Jarrett, called "the most photographed girl in America;" Frances Donelson, often seen in dark evening dress beside a Grecian pillar; Betty McLaughlin, who has a Grecian profile; Grace Moore, "undies" model; Barbara Beckwith, shoe and sportswear model; Jessie Shanks, who wears nightgowns with dash; Kitty Barrett, once selected as the most aristocratic woman in Kentucky.

Miss Epping, Back After 3 Years, Finds Art Hurt by His Policies.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

A PATRIOTIC SPINSTER in Nazi Germany gives up her job (if she still has one) and get herself a husband. A patriotic married woman has more and more children. Her sons begin marching almost as soon as they can walk; her husband marches in parades for Hitler, praises Hitler and his program, and lives in hope Germany is rapidly becoming one of the great powers of the world.

These are some observations of Miss Franc Dorothy Epping, American-born German, who recently returned from Germany where she spent three years studying sculpture at the Academy of Arts in Munich.

Discussing, dispassionately, some of the strong and weak points of the Nazi regime, Miss Epping said she had seen Hitler a number of times directing "patriotic demonstrations"—talking with his conferees—speaking to vast audiences. She is convinced he is an "extraordinary mob psychologist;" that he can inspire loyalty in the masses, "temporarily, at least;" and that he is "undoubtedly improving Germany's military status."

At Peak of Power.

She feels, however, that he has reached the peak of his power; that his influence is already declining; and that art in his country has suffered sa the result of his militaristic program.

"There is obviously a lowering of standards in all arts in modern Germany," she said. "I have noticed it particularly in sculpture. A country so much concerned with building its army, strengthening its military prowess, naturally has little time left for art in any form."

She mentioned, however, "There is apparently no discrimination against women sculptors in Germany, but in this, as in every field, a woman is never allowed to forget she is a woman; that her talents are different, though not necessarily inferior to man's."

She is thankful she had the opportunity to study in Germany because she feels "German motives in sculpture are sincere. Nothing is done simply for effect; artists there must have a better reason."

Two Superficial Trends.

Elaborating this idea, she pointed out there are two superficial trends in modern American sculpture that you won't find in Germany. "There is the popular practice of 'scooping out eyes' in portraits, to get a depth and a certain effect of shadow; and of working in angles, regardless of whether the subjects demand this treatment. That striving for certain 'effects' (how I hate the word!) has wrenched much American sculpture out of its natural line of development, has made it, in many cases, hollow and meaningless."

While Americans have followed many fads and tried all sorts of experiments, German sculpture hasn't undergone any radical changes in the last fifty years, she said. "But there is a new trend now," she said. "It is embodied in a single word—'plastic.'

"Exactly what this means in relation to modern sculpture is much easier to understand than to explain," she went on. "It implies letting one form lock into another without any definite break. In a torso, for example, the arms, chest and waist are all important. But when they are worked out according to the plastic method, no one part stands out more than any other. Each section merges into another smoothly; the observer, then, sees the torso as a whole before he notices the separate parts.

"The 'plastic' idea could never be successfully worked out by a sculptor working with angles and scooping out eyes for a certain effect. In that case, the eyes and the angles would overshadow the appearance of the figure as a whole."

She explained, step by step, how sculpture begins with a clay model ("where you work from the inside out"), next becomes a cast in plaster of paris, and is finally chiseled out of stone. "So a sculptor must be a good modeler as well as a skillful carver," she said.

One of her favorite mediums is wood, though it's more difficult than stone, she said, "because the threads may cause the original pattern to be changed entirely."

Miss Epping's career as a sculptor began when she was a child in school in California, "with ordinary modeling clay—the kind children have in school," she said. "Someone—I've forgotten who—discovered I could mold figures rather better than the average child, and encouraged me to study to be a sculptor. I've been at it ever since."

Swaying Walk Helps To Catch a Husband

New York, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Girls who sway when they walk probably will get married and live happily ever after. Those who walk in a straight line are likely to be old maids. That is the conclusion of Prof. William H. Blake, of Howard Mann School, who has studied posture for 25 years.

3 Suits Needed To Dress Well, Thibault Says

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—All this talk about needing so many suits, ties, shirts and socks as to require an adding machine to count them, is a lot of stuff and nonsense to at least one of the town's better dressed men.

Conrad Thibault, who is regarded as sartorially correct by those in the broadcasting business who know him, said today:

"No man needs more than three suits, I don't care who he is or how many places he goes. Of course, I'm excluding clothes for formal wear. Once you get a good dinner jacket and tail coat you don't need to replace them for years."

Thibault nas three suits:

A dark blue worsted with a thin silver pencil stripe. It is for business and semi-formal affairs. It is cut in a double-breasted jacket trimly tailored at the waist, and has sweeping lapels.

Salves Taboo For Glandular Fever Victims

Massaging of Painful Neck Muscles Has Tendency to Spread Disease.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MENTION has been made on numerous occasions of the ease with which many known types of infections gain entrance to the body via the nose, the mouth, and the throat. And now bacteriologists insist that some viruses, as yet unidentified, apparently find their way into the blood stream through these same avenues.

One such infection, glandular fever or infectious mononucleosis—has been recognized only during the last 30 or 40 years. The condition is characterized by a temperature that rises rapidly at about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The patient flushes up, that is, the skin of the face, head and neck becomes unusually red. When children are afflicted the parents may observe that the youngsters are fretful or cranky, and may, for several days prior to the attack, resent being disturbed. The early symptoms are chilly sensations, headache, loss of appetite, backache, sweating, general feeling of weakness, and sometimes signs simulating the beginning of an acute cold or influenza. Vomiting is sometimes present and may usher in the fever. As soon as the stomach is empty the nausea disappears. It can, of course, be aggravated by giving food, drink, or cathartics.

Rash Sometimes Observed.

One of the most constant symptoms is pain in the back of the neck. This is particularly observed when the patient attempts to move the head from side to side. Apparently there is a true inflammation of the muscles. On touching the skin gently, enlargement of the neck glands can be felt, extending from behind the ear downward to the shoulder.

The presence of a rash over the body, the extremities, and the face is observed in some cases. More than half the afflicted patients will sleep but fitfully for the first two or three nights and there may be considerable restlessness and dreamy delirium.

No specific remedy for the disease has as yet been discovered, and treatment is directed toward keeping the patient comfortable. Heat should not be applied to the swollen glands, and hot baths are not advised in the acute stage. The temperature of the room should not be higher than 70 degrees F., and better results may be expected if it is kept slightly lower. No rubbing or massage of the painful muscles (of the neck, etc.) should be attempted.

Many of these patients can take plenty of fluid as soon as the vomiting period has ceased. The mouth must be kept clean with proper washes, and sodium perborate is valuable for this purpose. An ice collar is frequently followed by relief of many of the painful symptoms.

New Sweater Crop Boasts Variety of Colors; Bright Ones Favored; Stripes Much to the Fore

Soft-as-Mist Importations Reflect Shades of Moors in Scotland.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The new sweater crop is exhilarating as the Christmas season . . . and any fashion-loving lady, with a practical notion or two, will be enchanted to find one or several among her Christmas presents.

The twin sweater sets are perennially popular. Because they can be worn separately or together, and with different skirts.

Stripes are much to the fore on all types of sweaters this season. Many are bold and horizontal, and quite British in flavor. Horizontal stripes being particularly good for those of lean and lanky proportions!

The new sweater crop boasts more colors than you can shake a stick at. Among the most popular are bright and heartening colors like cherry red and autumn glow—strong orange and rust colors—bright jewel tones and a deep evergreen shade that makes you fairly smell the woods!

Like that neat-as-a-pin little sweater blouse sketched at the upper right of our picture? We've the directions for making it . . . and that easy mesh stitch goes like lightning. Ideal for cruise wear in pastels and white . . . and for northern wear in deep colors. It's made of soft-as-soapsuds knit-crosheen, and how it likes a tubbing! Just mail us the attached coupon—with requested enclosures — and we'll send the directions off to you.

Veal Has a Definite Place in the Daily Diet, Acceptably Filling Several Roles

Cold Leftover Loaf Excellent For Sandwiches

Jellied, It's Particularly Suitable to Serve at Buffet Supper.

VEAL is a good meat to use when richness is not desired, for it is lean as well as tender. It has less fat than some of the other meats, so it lends itself well to the platter of assorted cold cuts, because of the direct flavor contrast that it affords when the fattier meats are included in the assortment. Veal loaf, for example, is good hot or cold, but it is particularly good sliced cold and put into sandwiches.

You will like the veal loaf recipe suggested by the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics, for it can be served hot on the day it has been prepared and the remainder can be used for the school lunch box sandwiches or it can be sliced thin and served in combination with other meats for the Sunday night supper.

Veal Loaf.

2 pounds ground raw veal
1 cup diced salt pork (about ½ pound)
1½ cups milk
4 tablespoons flour
½ cup chopped celery
¾ cup chopped onion
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon celery seed
½ cup chopped parsley

Fry the salt pork until light brown and crisp and remove the pieces from the pan. Make white sauce of the milk, flour and 3 tablespoons of the pork dripping. Cook the celery, parsley, and onion for a few minutes in the rest of the pork drippings, and add this to the bread crumbs and seasoning; combine all ingredients, using the hands to mix thoroughly. The mixture will have a sticky consistency. Lay a piece of parchment paper on a rack in an open roasting pan. Mold the meat loaf on the paper with the hands. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 1¼ hours. Do not cover the pan and do not add water to it. Remove the loaf from the paper and serve hot, or chill it for slicing cold.

Excellent for Buffet Supper.

You will also want this recipe for a jellied veal loaf. You will find it an excellent loaf to have on hand when holiday guests arrive and you want something especially nice for the buffet supper. The loaf, of course, can be made up a day in advance and kept in the refrigerator until ready to serve.

This loaf calls for a piece of meat bought especially for the purpose of making the loaf, and the knuckle bone of veal is included, for it provides good stock with considerable jellying power. But you can use left-over cooked veal from a roast, cutlet, or stew to make jellied veal. If you have no bones to make stock, you can manage in several other ways. Use three or four bouillon cubes dissolved in hot water to make a quart of stock; or use canned consomme. Less gelatin is needed when you use a knuckle of veal, however, because it has some gelatin of its own.

A mild-flavored lemon aspic, unsweetened, but flavored with Worcestershire sauce, soy sauce, and any other seasonings you like, may be substituted for the stock-flvored gelatin mentioned above. The lemon and other flavorings add a delightful contrast to the flavor of the veal.

Remember when making the jellied veal that meat jelly must be kept thoroughly chilled or it will spoil. After the gelatin has been added and the stock cooled, it will need several hours in the refrigerator to become firm.

Jellied Veal.

1 knuckle of veal, about 2 pounds
2 quarts cold water
1 onion, sliced
2 tablespoons cold water
½ cup finely cut celery
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons finely chopped pimiento
⅛ teaspoon celery seed
Dash or two of tabasco sauce

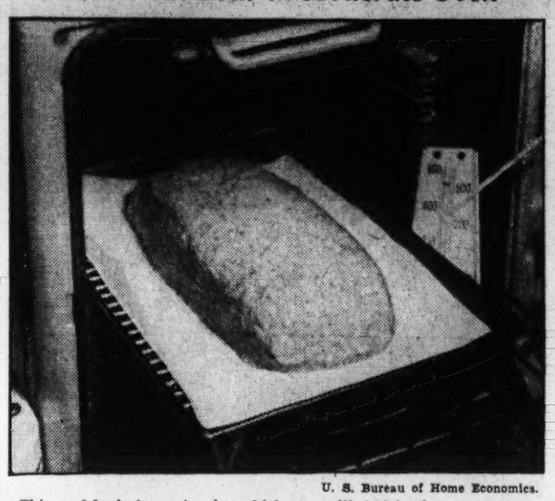
Have the butcher crack the bones. Wash the knuckle well and cover with the 2 quarts cold water. Add the onion. Heat slowly to the boiling point and then simmer, partly covered, until the meat is tender. Pour off and measure the liquid. There should be about a quart. Remove the meat from the bones, discarding all the gristle and bone splinters and either grind or chop the meat very fine. Soften the gelatin in 2 tablespoons of cold water and add to the hot stock, chill, and when partly set, add the meat and seasonings and stir until well mixed. Season to taste with salt, pepper, and tabasco sauce. Rinse a large mold or individual molds in cold water, pour in the mixture, and allow to stand some hours or overnight in a refrigerator. Remove from the molds and serve on beds of lettuce or if a large mold is used, unmold and slice loaf and serve on a platter with an assortment of cold sliced turkey, chicken, roast pork, baked ham or cheese.

Garment Union Plans For Strike by 105,000

Cleveland, Dec. 6 (AP).—The International Ladies Garment Workers Union's executive board prepared tonight for a strike of 105,000 workers in New York City, which they said would affect almost every market in the country.

Present agreements expire January 31 and the dressmakers' joint board was authorized to call a strike after that time if three demands of the union are not secured. These are limitation of the number of contractors in proportion to the size of the job, settlement of prices on jobbers' premises, and the unit system of price fixing.

Bake Veal Loaf in Moderate Oven



U. S. Bureau of Home Economics.

This veal loaf, the recipe for which you will find in the accompanying story, should be baked uncovered in a moderate oven. It is delicious served hot or cold, and when eaten cold is especially good in sandwiches.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday refused to receive a penciled note as the will of Miss Kate I. Earnshaw and granted letters of administration to her brother, John B. Earnshaw, proprietor of a wholesale grocery business.

Miss Earnshaw, the daughter of Basil B. Earnshaw, founder of the firm of B. B. Earnshaw & Bro., died last month. She left no will other than an informal direction that certain money should be given to various cousins. The document was not signed and Justice Letts refused to admit it to probate.

The brother, stating he was the only heir, asked that he be granted letters of administration on the estate. The bulk of the estate consisted of Miss Earnshaw's interest in the grocery business inherited from her father.

Buying of Seals Takes Large Drop

Sale of Christmas seals dropped alarmingly on Thursday, Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, director of the District Tuberculosis Association, asserted yesterday. She also announced that $6,000 more than originally sought would be needed in the fight against tuberculosis.

The increase will be necessary to take care of tubercular cases being disclosed by the Health Department's new case-finding drive, she said.

"Unless a better response is given the seals," she continued, "we will be unable to send nurses into homes of tubercular families next year. Free clinics for needy children afflicted with the disease will have to be closed. We will not be able to operate the children's health camp."

The seals, she said, could be obtained at the association, 1022 Eleventh street northwest; Franklin Postoffice, and Woodward & Lothrop's and Garfinckel's department stores.

Relief Problem Studied By U. S. Chest Leaders

Cincinnati, Dec. 6 (AP).—Leaders of Community Chests from throughout the United States struggled behind closed doors today with the problem of what to do now that the Federal Government is withdrawing direct relief.

They heard that all the money Community Chests raise in a year would suffice to carry the relief burden for a mere two weeks. But they heard, also, that Community Chest donations for 1936 were 4 per cent above those for 1935.

Many Inexpensive Table Linens Can Be Used to Create Proper Setting for Good Food

Peasant Cloths Come in Many Gay Patterns

By Dorothea Duncan.

EVERYONE will agree that good food is the most important factor of a meal, but strangely enough it is a merit that can not stand alone, for it needs a background of attractive service or the meal will lose its effectiveness. A clean, well set table creates a favorable impression and makes everyone look forward to the food that is to be served, while a table that has been carelessly set with soiled or wrinkled linen, tarnished silver and a cluttered array or dishes makes us feel that the hostess may be just as careless about her cooking as she has been about arranging her table.

D. DUNCAN.

It is not always the woman who has perfect table appointments that sets the best table. Table decorating and service is an art, but luckily for many, it can be accomplished without the most expensive of dishes, linen, silver, etc.

You will be surprised how observant husbands and children are of the attention you give to such things as table linen, silver and flowers. Your china may not match but it can be spotless and shining, and you can always remember to warm the plates when the food served is to be hot and to chill the plates when the food should be crisp and cold. Your silver may be plated, but it need not be dull or tarnished. You may not have roses for your table, but that is no excuse for a dusty artificial centerpiece.

Inexpensive Linen Effective.

The woman who cannot afford beautiful damask cloth and napkins will find many inexpensive and charming pieces of table linen that can be used just as effectively as the very expensive ones. The stores are showing gay peasant linens with hemstitched or fringed edges. These cloths usually have napkins to match. They are woven in delightful patterns and the colors are fast, which means that there is positively no excuse for not laundering a cloth as frequently as it deserves.

The woman who uses her ingenuity can always have an attractive table centerpiece. At present, a table decoration fashioned of scrubbed and polished vegetables is as smart as one created of the most expensive flowers that the florist has to offer. A plain, wooden salad bowl is always an effective background for such a table decoration. Bright fruit and vegetable table decorations are especially effective with the inexpensive checked or plaid table cloths.

The woman who is fortunate enough to possess two sets of dishes will find that her family will appreciate her effort to use the best china and silver occasionally for family use instead of closeting the Haviland except when company is invited to dinner. Bring out the best china and silver on Sunday or perhaps one night during the week just for the benefit of the family. They will appreciate your efforts just as much as the minister or your visiting great-aunt.

The woman who has no maid will find it a little harder to serve her food attractively than the woman who has a trained servant. The problem of serving the usual two or three course dinner, however, can be accomplished gracefully if it is planned so that there will be no confusion when the used dishes are being removed and the fresh ones being brought in.

Tea Wagon a Great Help.

A tea wagon will be a great help to the woman who must do her own serving. The tea or coffee cups and beverage pot may be placed close to the table at her right, for example, thus making the table less crowded and at the same time eliminating the necessity of leaving the table to serve the beverage.

The dessert plates, if the dessert is to be served at the table by the hostess, may be placed on the lower shelf of the tea wagon. Then when the main course is over, the hostess can be excused from the table long enough to remove the empty plates and bring the dessert to the table.

It is well to plan simple meals with few courses when there is no maid to serve the meal. The oldest daughter may relieve the mother of the above mentioned tasks when there is no servant. It is never wise, howevr, to have more than one person leave the table at the same time as it creates an atmosphere of confusion and the quiet spirit of the meal is disturbed.

Food Is Better When Served Correctly

Your dinner table may never approach one with a setting as formal as the one pictured above, yet it can always be as attractive to look at if the correct use is made of dishes and silver, if the centerpiece is artistically arranged, and the linen is crisp and fresh.

Braising or Baking Preferable for Pork Chops

Cuts Are Easy to Prepare but Length of Cooking Is Important.

SWEET savory pork chops will always be a great American favorite dish. Naturally they are more popular in the colder months for they lend themselves so delightfully to such delicious accompaniments as oven baked sweet potatoes, which have been mashed and served casserole style with a topping of richly browned marshmallows, fried apple rings, sauerkraut, etc.

Your special choice may be the familiar rib chops, or it may be for the larger, fatter loin chops having a dainty bit of the tenderloin muscle in each. You may prefer them cut only ½-inch thick or as wide as two full ribs. But whatever your choice of cut, the same quality characteristics apply to all good pork chops. The meat must be a clear pinkish tan with good amounts of rich, creamy fat well distributed through the lean. Dull color and flabby fat are pretty good indications of second rate quality.

You may be in the habit of demanding very lean pork chops, but don't forget that well fed and finished animals carry a goodly layer of fat and that they make the brownest, juciest chops. Pork fat is delicious in flavor if well cooked and should be eaten since it adds much to the food value of this nourishing meat.

Chops Easy to Prepare.

One of the reasons pork chops are so popular is because they are so easy to prepare. Too easy—for sometimes you are tempted to fry them too quickly and forget about the numberless delicious ways of preparing them.

Pork should always be well cooked, a fact which is sometimes dieregarded. That's why, in frying pork chops, you are apt to err either on the side of insufficient cooking or overlong frying, which makes them dry and tough.

The very best assurance of perfectly cooked chops is to braise them or bake them. First brown them in their own fat, then cover and cook slowly for 35 to 40 minutes for plain braised chops. Addition of prepared mustard, cream sauce, tomato sauce, etc., are just flavorful variations in the standard braising process. Chops baked with squares of peeled squash or parboiled sweet potatoes are delicious.

Double chops make generous servings and are a nice variation from the usual. Have rib chops cut one inch or more thick, then with a sharp-pointed knife cut a deep pocket, cutting from the bone side of the chop. Stuff with pineapple, sliced apples, celery stuffing or plain bread stuffing and bake in a slow oven like little individual roasts. These stuffed baked chops may be substituted for a large roast pork if the family is too small to warrant such an expenditure for roast.

Pork Chops Braised in Milk.

6 loin or rib chops
1 teaspoon mustard
Sale and pepper
1 tall can evaporated milk

Dip the chops in flour and brown well on both sides in lard or meat drippings. Season with salt and pepper, add mustard in tiny dots to each chop and pour evaporated milk (undiluted) over the meat. Cover and let cook in the oven for 45 to 50 minutes. Oven temperatures should be moderate.

Fruit Stuffed Pork Chops.

6 double thick rib chops
1 cup crushed pineapple
2 tart apples
¼ cup bread crumbs

Mix drained pineapple, chopped raw apple and bread crumbs for stuffing. Cut a pocket on the inside of each chop, stuff generously and place on a wire rack in a baking pan. Bake at 300 degrees F., for 1 to 1½ hours, basting occasionally with the juice from the pineapple. For a high glaze, mix a little brown sugar in the pineapple juice.

This Procedure Will Give Rice Delicious Taste

Follow Directions Closely Before Attempting a Pudding.

Wash one cup of rice thoroughly in several waters until all loose starch is removed. Drain. Have 2 quarts of water boiling in a deep saucepan. To the water add 3 teaspoons of salt, then slowly drop in the rice, and allow to boil for about twelve to twenty-five minutes, or until a grain when pressed between the thumb and finger is entirely soft. To prevent the rice from sticking to the bottom of the pan, lift, if necessary, from time to time, with a fork, but do not stir it, and this should be stressed with capital letters.

Wash Off Extra Starch.

When sufficiently cooked turn the rice into a colander or sieve. A little hot water may be run through the rice to wash off extra starch. After the water has drained off, cover with a cloth and set over a pan of hot water on the back of the stove or in the oven; or turn the rice into a shallow pan, and place in a warm oven for a short time. Treated in this way, the grains swell and are kept separate.

Rice cooked in hard water is not as white as that cooked in soft water. One teaspoon of lemon juice, one half teaspoon of cream of tartar, or one teaspoon of vinegar may be used in hard water to insure a snowy-white cooked rice.

Honey, Rice and Date Pudding.

2 cups cooked rice
2 eggs, beaten light
One-third to ½ cup honey
½ cup chopped dates or raisins
1 cup milk

Mix beaten eggs and milk. Make alternate layers of rice, dates or raisins. Drizzle honey over each of these layers. Repeat this procedure until all rice and fruit is used. Pour beaten eggs and milk over this mixture. Bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

Alligator Pears.

We used to hear about alligator pears, a fruit so rare as to seem exotic and thrilling. If you have wondered why they no longer break into conversation, the reason is that the same pears are now more generally called avocadoes, and we can buy them almost anywhere.

How to Brown Flour.

Browned flour can be made by sifting the desired amount of flour into a heavy iron frying pan, and browning it inside the oven, scraping it from the bottom of the pan as it browns.

Roux Paste Making.

A paste of butter and flour is called a roux and is often used in soups to bind the heavier and lighter liquids together. The roux is made by first melting the butter and then stirring in the flour until a smooth paste is formed. Proportions for a roux are usually one tablespoon of flour to one tablespoon of butter.

Watch Gelatin Use.

Do not make gelatin dessert too stiff. When too much gelatin is used the dessert will be tough and rubbery.

Canned Pears Top Off Meal

They Often Provide Delicate Touch Needed After a Large Dinner.

NO DOUBT you have found out that canned pears are often just the delicate finish to a hearty meal. Their mildness is a pleasing ending and never overshadows the food served before. This is an ideal finish to a meal planned with discrimination.

Sometimes just serving the pears as sauce is the correct thing to do, and then again it is better to serve them with a whipped gelatin mixture, or heated and served with a little rum sauce. This seldom fails to bring smiles of satisfaction to the diners.

There are also sliced pears available in tin cans and they, too, fit into the menu—in cocktails, salads, frozen desserts, or combining with other canned or fresh fruits.

The canned pears prepared from selected Bartlett pears have a light syrup that enhances the gentle flavor of the fruit. Often for a change the pears taste good if served on sponge cake with a chocolate sauce, or cooked in their own syrup with a dash of lemon juice and grated peel. And as a combination to serve with creamy rice pudding they are delicious.

Crickets Cause Lot of Damage

They Can Be Destroyed With Fly Swatter, Spray or Poison Bait.

HAVE you a little cricket in your home that enlivens the cold evenings by loud and merry chirping? If so, get rid of it promptly, otherwise it may raise a very destructive family. The singing of the cricket on the hearth has been praised by poets, but practical persons, even though they may enjoy the cheerful chirping realize these little insects can do a great deal of damage to clothing, table linens, bookbindings, etc.

The way to control crickets is to swat them with a fly swatter or squirt fly spray on them. Fresh pyrethrum powder scattered along the baseboards is also effective. Or a poison bait can be scattered around infested basements. Here's a formula that is often used (in much larger amounts) on dumps where crickets breed. Bran, one pound; sodium fluosilicate, four-fifths ounce; cane molasses, 5 tablespoons; water, 1 pint. Take care to keep this bait away from children or chickens.

Young Roasting Chickens Can Be Fried

PLUMP young roasting chickens have long since taken the place of fryers, but those who are especially fond of fried chicken need have no regrets over the passing of the fryer season. The meaty little fellows which escaped an early fall visit to the fattening pens have added another pound or two, and those extra pounds, according to simple arithmetic and nature's laws, make them roasting chickens. But they are still young, tender and delicate, and therefore they can still be fried with delectable results. All they need is a little more time to cook. Otherwise the frying is the same as for the smaller birds.

Stuffing is so delicious that few persons like to serve roasted chicken without it. For those who wish to dispense with the work of stuffing, we suggest that they ask their market man to cut up the bird just as he cuts a fryer or stewing fowl. The cut-up roasting chicken may then be baked in a casserole or a skillet and served with gravy. The pieces are browned first on top of the range, then the pan is covered and set into a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for an hour or until the chicken is tender. Potatoes and apples may be baked at the same time, so that the oven carries a full load while it is operating. This kind of dinner also has the advantage of requiring almost no attention while it is cooking.

Another way to cook cut-up roasting chicken is to put a well seasoned stuffing in the bottom of a large casserole and place the pieces of browned chicken on top. Cover and bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit until the chicken is done, about 1¼ hours.

Cooky Name Cards.

Name cards can be made from square or round cookies. When baking, "write" the names on with melted chocolate or frosting, using a wood pick.

Veal Has a Definite Place in the Daily Diet, Acceptably Filling Several Roles

Cold Leftover Loaf Excellent For Sandwiches

Jellied, It's Particularly Suitable to Serve at Buffet Supper.

VEAL is a good meat to use when richness is not desired, for it is lean as well as tender. It has less fat than some of the other meats, so it lends itself well to the platter of assorted cold cuts, because of the direct flavor contrast that it affords when the fattier meats are included in the assortment. Veal loaf, for example, is good hot or cold, but it is particularly good sliced cold and put into sandwiches.

You will like the veal loaf recipe suggested by the U. S. Bureau of Home Economics, for it can be served hot on the day it has been prepared and the remainder can be used for the school lunch box sandwiches or it can be sliced thin and served in combination with other meats for the Sunday night supper.

Veal Loaf.

2 pounds ground raw veal
1 cup diced salt pork (about ½ pound)
1½ cups milk
4 tablespoons flour
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped onion
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 teaspoons salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon celery seed
½ cup chopped parsley

Fry the salt pork until light brown and crisp and remove the pieces from the pan. Make white sauce of the milk, flour and 3 tablespoons of the pork dripping. Cook the celery, parsley, and onion for a few minutes in the rest of the pork drippings, and add this to the bread crumbs and seasoning; combine all ingredients, using the hands to mix thoroughly. The mixture will have a sticky consistency. Lay a piece of parchment paper on a rack in an open roasting pan. Mold the meat loaf on the paper with the hands. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 1¼ hours. Do not cover the pan and do not add water to it. Remove the loaf from the paper and serve hot, or chill it for slicing cold.

Excellent for Buffet Supper.

You will also want this recipe for a jellied veal loaf. You will find it an excellent loaf to have on hand when holiday guests arrive and you want something especially nice for the buffet supper. The loaf, of course, can be made up a day in advance and kept in the refrigerator until ready to serve.

This loaf calls for a piece of meat bought especially for the purpose of making the loaf, and the knuckle bone of veal is included, for it provides good stock with considerable jellying power. But you can use left-over cooked veal from a roast, cutlet, or stew to make jellied veal. If you have no bones to make stock, you can manage in several other ways. Use three or four bouillon cubes dissolved in hot water to make a quart of stock; or use canned consomme. Less gelatin is needed when you use a knuckle of veal, however, because it has some gelatin of its own.

A mild-flavored lemon aspic, unsweetened, but flavored with Worcestershire sauce, soy sauce, and any other seasonings you like, may be substituted for the stock-flvored gelatin mentioned above. The lemon and other flavorings add a delightful contrast to the flavor of the veal.

Remember when making the jellied veal that meat jelly must be kept thoroughly chilled or it will spoil. After the gelatin has been added and the stock cooled, it will need several hours in the refrigerator to become firm.

Jellied Veal.

1 knuckle of veal, about 2 pounds
2 quarts cold water
1 onion, sliced
2 tablespoons cold water
½ cup finely cut celery
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons finely chopped pimiento
⅛ teaspoon celery seed
Dash or two of tabasco sauce

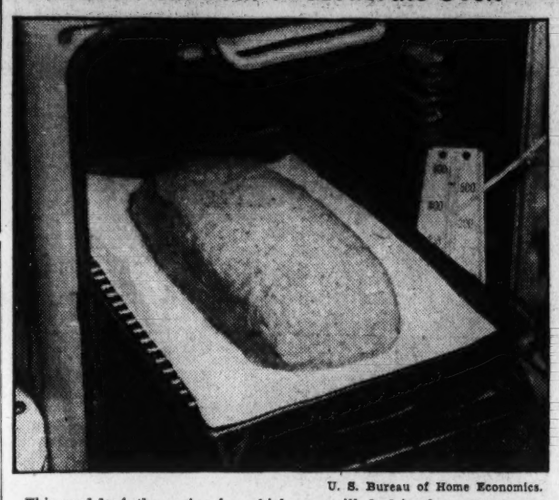
Have the butcher crack the bones. Wash the knuckle well and cover with the 2 quarts cold water. Add the onion. Heat slowly to the boiling point and then simmer, partly covered, until the meat is tender. Pour off and measure the liquid. There should be about a quart. Remove the meat from the bones, discarding all the gristle and bone splinters and either grind or chop the meat very fine. Soften the gelatin in 2 tablespoons of cold water and add to the hot stock, chill, and when partly set, add the meat and seasonings and stir until well mixed. Season to taste with salt, pepper, and tabasco sauce. Rinse a large mold or individual molds in cold water, pour in the mixture, and allow to stand some hours or overnight in a refrigerator. Remove from the molds and serve on beds of lettuce or if a large mold is used, unmold and slice loaf and serve on a platter with an assortment of cold sliced turkey, chicken, roast pork, baked ham or cheese.

Garment Union Plans For Strike by 105,000

Cleveland, Dec. 6 (AP).—The International Ladies Garment Workers Union's executive board prepared tonight for a strike of 105,000 workers in New York City, which they said would affect almost every market in the country.

Present agreements expire January 31 and the dressmakers' joint board was authorized to call a strike after that time if three demands of the union are not secured. These are limitation of the number of contractors in proportion to the size of the job, settlement of prices on jobbers' premises, and the unit system of price fixing.

Bake Veal Loaf in Moderate Oven



U. S. Bureau of Home Economics.

This veal loaf, the recipe for which you will find in the accompanying story, should be baked uncovered in a moderate oven. It is delicious served hot or cold, and when eaten cold is especially good in sandwiches.

Military Franchise Rights.

Q.—Are members of the Army and Navy entitled to vote in the State where stationed?—Capt. A. B. Windfret (C).

As citizens, however, they can vote wherever their legal residence is if they happen to be there at the time of registering and voting. Absentee voting is permitted in some States.

D. C. Court Rejects Penciled Will Note

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday refused to receive a penciled note as the will of Miss Kate I. Earnshaw and granted letters of administration to her brother, John B. Earnshaw, proprietor of a wholesale grocery business.

Miss Earnshaw, the daughter of Basil B. Earnshaw, founder of the firm of B. B. Earnshaw & Bro., died last month. She left no will other than an informal direction that certain money should be given to various cousins. The document was not signed and Justice Letts refused to admit it to probate.

The brother, stating he was the only heir, asked that he be granted letters of administration on the estate. The bulk of the estate consisted of Miss Earnshaw's interest in the grocery business inherited from her father.

Cuban Cabinet Sets Elections for Jan. 10

Havana, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Cuban cabinet has approved the report of Dr. Harold W. Dodds, American electoral adviser to the Cuban government, and has set January 10 as the date for elections, Secretary of the Interior Maximiliano A. Smith announced late today.

Dr. Dodds, president of Princeton University, was called to Havana after elections set for this month had been postponed, following upon a high court ruling outlawing party mergers. He left today for Miami.

Buying of Seals Takes Large Drop

Sale of Christmas seals dropped alarmingly on Thursday, Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, director of the District Tuberculosis Association, asserted yesterday. She also announced that $6,000 more than originally sought would be needed in the fight against tuberculosis.

The increase will be necessary to take care of tubercular cases being disclosed by the Health Department's new case-finding drive, she said.

"Unless a better response is given the seals," she continued, "we will be unable to send nurses into homes of tubercular families next year. Free clinics for needy children afflicted with the disease will have to be closed. We will not be able to operate the children's health camp."

The seals, she said, could be obtained at the association, 1022 Eleventh street northwest; Franklin Postoffice, and Woodward & Lothrop's and Garfinckel's department stores.

Relief Problem Studied By U. S. Chest Leaders

Cincinnati, Dec. 6 (AP).—Leaders of Community Chests from throughout the United States struggled behind closed doors today with the problem of what to do now that the Federal Government is withdrawing direct relief.

They heard that all the money Community Chests raise in a year would suffice to carry the relief burden for a mere two weeks. But they heard, also, that Community Chest donations for 1936 were 4 per cent above those for 1935.

Many Inexpensive Table Linens Can Be Used to Create Proper Setting for Good Food

Peasant Cloths Come in Many Gay Patterns

By Dorothea Duncan.

EVERYONE will agree that good food is the most important factor of a meal, but strangely enough it is a merit that can not stand alone, for it needs a background of attractive service or the meal will lose its effectiveness. A clean, well set table creates a favorable impression and makes everyone look forward to the food that is to be served, while a table that has been carelessly set with soiled or wrinkled linen, tarnished silver and a cluttered array or dishes makes us feel that the hostess may be just as careless about her cooking as she has been about arranging her table.

D. DUNCAN.

It is not always the woman who has perfect table appointments that sets the best table. Table decorating and service is an art, but luckily for many, it can be accomplished without the most expensive of dishes, linen, silver, etc.

You will be surprised how observant husbands and children are of the attention you give to such things as table linen, silver and flowers. Your china may not match but it can be spotless and shining, and you can always remember to warm the plates when the food served is to be hot and to chill the plates when the food should be crisp and cold. Your silver may be plated, but it need not be dull or tarnished. You may not have roses for your table, but that is no excuse for a dusty artificial centerpiece.

Inexpensive Linen Effective.

The woman who cannot afford beautiful damask cloth and napkins will find many inexpensive and charming pieces of table linen that can be used just as effectively as the very expensive ones. The stores are showing gay peasant linens with hemstitched or fringed edges. These cloths usually have napkins to match. They are woven in delightful patterns and the colors are fast, which means that there is positively no excuse for not laundering a cloth as frequently as it deserves.

The woman who uses her ingenuity can always have an attractive table centerpiece. At present, a table decoration fashioned of scrubbed and polished vegetables is as smart as one created of the most expensive flowers that the florist has to offer. A plain, wooden salad bowl is always an effective background for such a table decoration. Bright fruit and vegetable table decorations are especially effective with the inexpensive checked or plaid table cloths.

The woman who is fortunate enough to possess two sets of dishes will find that her family will appreciate her effort to use the best china and silver occasionally for family use instead of closeting the Haviland except when company is invited to dinner. Bring out the best china and silver on Sunday or perhaps one night during the week just for the benefit of the family. They will appreciate your efforts just as much as the minister or your visiting great-aunt.

The woman who has no maid will find it a little harder to serve her food attractively than the woman who has a trained servant. The problem of serving the usual two or three course dinner, however, can be accomplished gracefully if it is planned so that there will be no confusion when the used dishes are being removed and the fresh ones being brought in.

Tea Wagon a Great Help.

A tea wagon will be a great help to the woman who must do her own serving. The tea or coffee cups and beverage pot may be placed close to the table at her right, for example, thus making the table less crowded and at the same time eliminating the necessity of leaving the table to serve the beverage.

The dessert plates, if the dessert is to be served at the table by the hostess, may be placed on the lower shelf of the tea wagon. Then when the main course is over, the hostess can be excused from the table long enough to remove the empty plates and bring the dessert to the table.

It is well to plan simple meals with few courses when there is no maid to serve the meal. The oldest daughter may relieve the mother of the above mentioned tasks when there is no servant. It is never wise, howevr, to have more than one person leave the table at the same time as it creates an atmosphere of confusion and the quiet spirit of the meal is disturbed.

Food Is Better When Served Correctly

Your dinner table may never approach one with a setting as formal as the one pictured above, yet it can always be as attractive to look at if the correct use is made of dishes and silver, if the centerpiece is artistically arranged, and the linen is crisp and fresh.

Braising or Baking Preferable for Pork Chops

Cuts Are Easy to Prepare but Length of Cooking Is Important.

SWEET savory pork chops will always be a great American favorite dish. Naturally they are more popular in the colder months for they lend themselves so delightfully to such delicious accompaniments as oven baked sweet potatoes, which have been mashed and served casserole style with a topping of richly browned marshmallows, fried apple rings, sauerkraut, etc.

Your special choice may be the familiar rib chops, or it may be for the larger, fatter loin chops having a dainty bit of the tenderloin muscle in each. You may prefer them cut only ½-inch thick or as wid e as two full ribs. But whatever your choice of cut, the same quality characteristics apply to all good pork chops. The meat must be a clear pinkish tan with good amounts of rich, creamy fat well distributed through the lean. Dull color and flabby fat are pretty good indications of second rate quality.

You may be in the habit of demanding very lean pork chops, but don't forget that well fed and finished animals carry a goodly layer of fat and that they make the brownest, juciest chops. Pork fat is delicious in flavor if well cooked and should be eaten since it adds much to the food value of this nourishing meat.

Chops Easy to Prepare.

One of the reasons pork chops are so popular is because they are so easy to prepare. Too easy—for sometimes you are tempted to fry them too quickly and forget about the numberless delicious ways of preparing them.

Pork should always be well cooked, a fact which is sometimes dieregarded. That's why, in frying pork chops, you are apt to err either on the side of insufficient cooking or overlong frying, which makes them dry and tough.

The very best assurance of perfectly cooked chops is to braise them or bake them. First brown them in their own fat, then cover and cook slowly for 35 to 40 minutes for plain braised chops. Addition of prepared mustard, cream sauce, tomato sauce, etc., are just flavorful variations in the standard braising process. Chops baked with squares of peeled squash or parboiled sweet potatoes are delicious.

Double chops make generous servings and are a nice variation from the usual. Have rib chops cut one inch or more thick, then with a sharp-pointed knife cut a deep pocket, cutting from the bone side of the chop. Stuff with pineapple, sliced apples, celery stuffing or plain bread stuffing and bake in a slow oven like little individual roasts. These stuffed baked chops may be substituted for a large roast pork if the family is too small to warrant such an expenditure for roast.

Pork Chops Braised in Milk.

6 loin or rib chops
1 teaspoon mustard
Sale and pepper
1 tall can evaporated milk

Dip the chops in flour and brown well on both sides in lard or meat drippings. Season with salt and pepper, add mustard in tiny dots to each chop and pour evaporated milk (undiluted) over the meat. Cover and let cook in the oven for 45 to 50 minutes. Oven temperatures should be moderate.

Fruit Stuffed Pork Chops.

6 double thick rib chops
1 cup crushed pineapple
2 tart apples
¼ cup bread crumbs

Mix drained pineapple, chopped raw apple and bread crumbs for stuffing. Cut a pocket on the inside of each chop, stuff generously and place on a wire rack in a baking pan. Bake at 300 degrees F., for 1 to 1½ hours, basting occasionally with the juice from the pineapple. For a high glaze, mix a little brown sugar in the pineapple juice.

This Procedure Will Give Rice Delicious Taste

Follow Directions Closely Before Attempting a Pudding.

Wash one cup of rice thoroughly in several waters until all loose starch is removed. Drain. Have 2 quarts of water boiling in a deep saucepan. To the water add 3 teaspoons of salt, then slowly drop in the rice, and allow to boil for about twelve to twenty-five minutes, or until a grain when pressed between the thumb and finger is entirely soft. To prevent the rice from sticking to the bottom of the pan, lift, if necessary, from time to time, with a fork, but do not stir it, and this should be stressed with capital letters.

Wash Off Extra Starch.

When sufficiently cooked turn the rice into a colander or sieve. A little hot water may be run through the rice to wash off extra starch. After the water has drained off, cover with a cloth and set over a pan of hot water on the back of the stove or in the oven; or turn the rice into a shallow pan, and place in a warm oven for a short time. Treated in this way, the grains swell and are kept separate.

Rice cooked in hard water is not as white as that cooked in soft water. One teaspoon of lemon juice, one half teaspoon of cream of tartar, or one teaspoon of vinegar may be used in hard water to insure a snowy-white cooked rice.

Honey, Rice and Date Pudding.

2 cups cooked rice
2 eggs, beaten light
One-third to ½ cup honey
½ cup chopped dates or raisins
1 cup milk

Mix beaten eggs and milk. Make alternate layers of rice, dates or raisins. Drizzle honey over each of these layers. Repeat this procedure until all rice and fruit is used. Pour beaten eggs and milk over this mixture. Bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes.

Alligator Pears.

We used to hear about alligator pears, a fruit so rare as to seem exotic and thrilling. If you have wondered why they no longer break into conversation, the reason is that the same pears are now more generally called avocadoes, and we can buy them almost anywhere.

How to Brown Flour.

Browned flour can be made by sifting the desired amount of flour into a heavy iron frying pan, and browning it inside the oven, scraping it from the bottom of the pan as it browns.

Roux Paste Making.

A paste of butter and flour is called a roux and is often used in soups to bind the heavier and lighter liquids together. The roux is made by first melting the butter and then stirring in the flour until a smooth paste is formed. Proportions for a roux are usually one tablespoon of flour to one tablespoon of butter.

Watch Gelatin Use.

Do not make gelatin dessert too stiff. When too much gelatin is used the dessert will be tough and rubbery.

Canned Pears Top Off Meal

They Often Provide Delicate Touch Needed After a Large Dinner.

NO DOUBT you have found out that canned pears are often just the delicate finish to a hearty meal. Their mildness is a pleasing ending and never overshadows the food served before. This is an ideal finish to a meal planned with discrimination.

Sometimes just serving the pears as sauce is the correct thing to do, and then again it is better to serve them with a whipped gelatin mixture, or heated and served with a little rum sauce. This seldom fails to bring smiles of satisfaction to the diners.

There are also sliced pears available in tin cans and they, too, fit into the menu—in cocktails, salads, frozen desserts, or combining with other canned or fresh fruits.

The canned pears prepared from selected Bartlett pears have a light syrup that enhances the gentle flavor of the fruit. Often for a change the pears taste good if served on sponge cake with a chocolate sauce, or cooked in their own syrup with a dash of lemon juice and grated peel. And as a combination to serve with creamy rice pudding they are delicious.

Crickets Cause Lot of Damage

HAVE you a little cricket in your home that enlivens the cold evenings by loud and merry chirping? If so, get rid of it promptly, otherwise it may raise a very destructive family. The singing of the cricket on the hearth has been praised by poets, but practical persons, even though they may enjoy the cheerful chirping realize these little insects can do a great deal of damage to clothing, table linens, bookbindings, etc.

The way to control crickets is to swat them with a fly swatter or squirt fly spray on them. Fresh pyrethrum powder scattered along the baseboards is also effective. Or a poison bait can be scattered around infested basements. Here's a formula that is often used (in much larger amounts) on dumps where crickets breed. Bran, one pound; sodium fluosilicate, four-fifths ounce; cane molasses, 5 tablespoons; water, 1 pint. Take care to keep this bait away from children or chickens.

Young Roasting Chickens Can Be Fried

PLUMP young roasting chickens have long since taken the place of fryers, but those who are especially fond of fried chicken need have no regrets over the passing of the fryer season. The meaty little fellows which escaped an early fall visit to the fattening pens have added another pound or two, and those extra pounds, according to simple arithmetic and nature's laws, make them roasting chickens. But they are still young, tender and delicate, and therefore they can still be fried with delectable results. All they need is a little more time to cook. Otherwise the frying is the same as for the smaller birds.

Stuffing is so delicious that few persons like to serve roasted chicken without it. For those who wish to dispense with the work of stuffing, we suggest that they ask their market man to cut up the bird just as he cuts a fryer or stewing fowl. The cut-up roasting chicken may then be baked in a casserole or a skillet and served with gravy. The pieces are browned first on top of the range, then the pan is covered and set into a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for an hour or until the chicken is tender. Potatoes and apples may be baked at the same time, so that the oven carries a full load while it is operating. This kind of dinner also has the advantage of requiring almost no attention while it is cooking.

Another way to cook cut-up roasting chicken is to put a well seasoned stuffing in the bottom of a large casserole and place the pieces of browned chicken on top. Cover and bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit until the chicken is done, about 1¼ hours.

Cooky Name Cards.

Tapped Phones Give Evidence At Plot Trial

3 Charged With Conspiracy to 'Fix' Income Tax of Utilities Man.

Despite repeated objections by defense counsel, witnesses told of listening in on telephone conversations between Frank B. McElhill, New York tax consultant, and John W. Hardgrove, former Internal Revenue Bureau chief conferee.

McElhill, Hardgrove and Henning R. Nelson, a former bureau auditor, went on trial after Thomas N. McCarter, New Jersey public utilities magnate, complained to Secretary Morgenthau that McElhill offered to settle his $149,000 income-tax assessment for $10,000.

Office, Home Phones Tapped.

Methods of tapping the office and home telephone wires of all of the defendants were outlined to the jury by five bureau agents, John Saxon, jr., William J. Mellin, E. C. Palmer, H. W. Olson and L. A. Harris.

Palmer told of a telephone conversation he overheard between McElhill, in New York, and Hardgrove, who spoke from the Internal Revenue Bureau office here. Among other things, Palmer testified, the pair said:

McElhill—"Hello, John."

Hardgrove—"Yes?"

McElhill—"How are you. Listen, I saw our friend across the river and he gave me the letter all right."

Hardgrove—"Yes."

McElhill—"I'll do anything you want me to do on your vacation. Can you play some golf? * * * I'd like to have you join us."

Hardgrove—"All right."

McElhill—"You think it over and let me know."

Friend Across River.

McElhill, it was brought out, referred to McCarter when he spoke of "our friend across the river" and by "the letter" he meant a letter from McCarter giving him power of attorney to represent the utilities man in the tax matter.

Saxon testified concerning a telephone conversation he overheard between McElhill and McCarter in which the $10,000 fee and the power of attorney letter were discussed.

McElhill, Saxon said, assured McCarter he would "clear up" the tax case, "in a few days."

William E. Leahy, of defense counsel, was overruled by Justice F. Dickinson Letts when he objected to questioning of John R. Cox, head of the Internal Revenue Bureau Intelligence Unit's Washington office.

Cox, Leahy argued, "acted without authority of law" by "arresting" Hardgrove and Nelson. The jurist upheld the prosecution's contention that Cox did not arrest the men before he questioned them.

Compulsion was not employed, Cox said, in the questioning of anyone.

Students' Coats Stolen.

Three youths, students at Roosevelt High School, reported yesterday that their overcoats were stolen from lockers in the basement of the school. The coats were owned by Hazen Kennedy, 1512 Buchanan street northwest; Robert Heitmuller, 1316 Shepard street northwest, and his brother Ralph.

12,500 Rainbow Trout Eggs To Be Hatched in Aquarium

Annual Shipment Is Sent Commerce Department Plant Here.

Twenty-five thousand little globules that will bloom as rainbow trout soon after New Year's Day arrived at the Commerce Aquarium yesterday to be welcomed by Director Fred Orsinger.

Dependable harbingers of winter, 12,500 of the eggs will be hatched here and the other half of the consignment will make debuts in New York's famous Battery Aquarium. Fulfilling an annual custom, both aquaria will conduct their trout-hatching demonstrations concurrently.

Spawned at the Bureau of Fisheries station at Wytheville, Va., the eggs are about the size of B-B shot. They are of the non-buoyant type and, in the natural state, lie on stream beds until hatched. This takes anywhere from 30 to 120 days, depending on the water temperature—warmer the water, faster the process.

In artificial breeding, the eggs are spread on wire-netted trays which are suspended in a tank. Water is kept running with sufficient force to percolate through the trays, gently agitating the prospective nibblers.

In the local demonstration, eagerly awaited each year by biology classes, scientific fishermen and others, cold water will be used as it comes from the city pipes. As the fish hatch, they will slip through the tray and rest on the bottom for a month, living on the food sac Nature gave them. When they show signs of activity, it's time for Orsinger to toss them raw liver and ground beef heart.

Meat prices are steep nowadays and the rainbow trout are strictly carnivorous, so the aquarium, for economy's sake, will dump most of the fishlings into sportsmen's streams even before they reach legal size. Some, of course, will be kept for exhibition purposes.

Full grown, the species attains up to 3 pounds in weight and 14 inches in length in Eastern waters. Out West, where rainbow trout are more numerous, they sometimes reach three times that size. It takes them about two years to become adults.

Finally, don't be too disappointed if you can't find the rainbow on the aquarium's rainbow trout, young or old. When Nature is allowed to take its course, the fish has an iridescent stripe along its side. Hence the name. But the artificial fellows with Wytheville pedigrees have only a faint marking where the rainbow should be.

Diplomatic Privilege.

"I may say in this connection that this Government has at all times impressed upon its own official representatives abroad that the privilege of diplomatic immunity does not presuppose the right to violate any of the laws or regulations, national or local, of the country to which they are accredited; that, on the contrary, the privilege of such immunity imposes upon them the obligation of observing meticulously such laws and regulations.

Church Council Assails Federal Relief Policies

Convention Is Encouraged by Marked Increase in Donations.

Evidencing grave concern over allegedly un-Christian aspects of the American Government, but encouraged by the increase in church donations, the United Stewardship Council of Churches opened its annual meeting here yesterday.

Members of the council, which represents some 25,000,000 active communicants in 25 Protestant denominations in the United States and Canada, spent most of the opening session drafting a resolution which doubts the wisdom of the Government's "giving something for nothing" to persons on relief.

Framing the protest was attended by so much debate that it was not completed at the close of yesterday's meeting at the Raleigh Hotel. The resolution will be voted on at the final session today. The preliminary draft, besides questioning the Federal relief program, also attacks the practice of churches raising money by card games, lotteries and games of chance.

With the Rev. Dr. Warren Dennison, of Dayton, Ohio, presiding, the council discussed the manuscript of "Christian Materialism," a book written by Bishop Francis J. McConnell at the request of the church body. The book, to be published next month, makes "inquiries into the getting, spending and giving of money."

Chapters will be devoted to "tainted" money, speculation, the consumer's obligation toward labor conditions, liquor and spending and missionary work.

Interpreting the increase in church donations as a sure sign of economic recovery, the council divulged the following comparative figures:

No figures were available on the seven other denominations because their fiscal years are not over or they ended so recently that reports have not yet been made. Altogether, in 1934 living members of the 25 denominations donated $300,000,000 to their respective churches.

All but three of the affiliated groups, which are Canadian, are in the United States.

Many Others in Same Class, Says Prohibition Leader.

Many liquor dealers here have "no right" to sell alcohol because of their records, Dr. E. M. Ellison, United Dry Forces president, charged last night in Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church.

Both Ellison and J. Raymond Schmidt, speaker at another dry rally in West Washington Baptist Church, urged passage of the Guyer bill to restore prohibition in the District.

Cheers swept through the church as Ellison assailed issuance of a beer license to Edward V. Killeen, gambling baron, who was killed recently at his Conduit road home in Maryland.

"I'm sure Washington had a shock," Ellison said, "when it came to light that Uncle Sam was in partnership with Eddie Killeen.

Suspects Many Others.

"I am just as sure there are many other people in the liquor business here who have no more right in it than he had."

Ellison said he was "shocked" when he read that a member of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, whom he did not identify, declared liquor conditions here have improved 100 per cent since repeal.

"That is an unspeakable falsehood," Ellison answered.

"He's a Methodist, too," said someone in the audience.

"That makes it worse," shouted someone else.

Ellison read from a newspaper article which quoted Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, as announcing he would oppose efforts to make Washington dry.

"I must say I admire Dirksen for his frankness," Ellison added, "for he doesn't hesitate to say he doesn't want us to interfere with the pernicious activities of the five distilleries in his district and take away his job."

Repeal vs. Prohibition.

The speaker often compared repeal conditions here with those which prevailed under prohibition.

"Our situation in Washington regarding liquor," he said, "is already worse than at any time in our history."

Ellison characterized whisky as a "narcotic, a drug, a poison" and said it caused many diseases.

"Repeal is doomed," he concluded. "The people who have turned hell loose under the Stars and Stripes are due for a rude awakening."

In introducing Ellison, the Rev. Edward Ford, assistant pastor of Foundry Church, said it would be "a splendid thing" if "we could dry up Washington and set an outstanding example for the country."

Twenty-seven persons attended the rally.

Schmidt took issue with George W. Offutt, jr., Alcoholic Beverage Control Board chairman, on recent statements at the Baptist Church meeting.

"Mr. Offutt," Schmidt said, "told the bartenders of the District that the liquor business has taken 2,000 unemployed persons off the streets and is putting $2,000,000 annually in the District treasury.

Legitimate Lives Suffer.

"Somebody must spend less for the necessities of life in order that 2,000 men may work in the liquor business.

"As the intake of the drink traffic increases legitimate lines like groceries, soft drinks and milk products must suffer. It is easily possible that for every person employed by the liquor traffic two will be laid off in legitimate lines."

Schmidt urged his audience of 50 persons to attend a dry rally tomorrow at 3 p. m. in National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle. Speakers will include Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, New York, national vice president, Women's Christian Temperance Union; Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, Metropolitan Police, and Dr. Harry E. Woolever, editor of the National Methodist Press.

Smoke Sweeps Skyward as Firemen Battle Blaze

Firemen didn't have a chance to save the R. B. Phelps Stone Co. last night. The large structure at Ninth and Douglas streets northeast was destroyed. There were three alarms.

2,000 Witness 3-Alarm Blaze At Stone Plant

Damage Put at $25,000; Origin of Northeast Fire Undetermined.

Flames 100 feet high attracted a crowd of more than 2,000 to the three-alarm blaze which last night completely destroyed the huge wooden building of the R. B. Phelps Stone Co. at Ninth and Douglas streets northeast.

The fire, which broke out shortly after 8 p. m., brought ten fire companies, three trucks and three battalion chiefs. The structure burned like a tinder box and firemen concentrated their efforts on preventing its spread to adjacent warehouses, one of which, the Du-Rite Chemical Co., contained explosive chemicals, police said.

The damage, tentatively estimated by Mrs. Phelps, wife of the owner, included not only the building, but highly valuable electric stone-cutting equipment and four or five trucks. The property, owned by her husband for more than 25 years, was only partially insured, she said.

First Battalion Chief C. W. Gill, first to respond to the alarm, said that when he dashed out of his fire house at North Capitol and Quincy streets, he could see the glare in the sky.

"It was too late to put it out," he explained. "The building was almost gone when we arrived. We concentrated on protecting the Tompkins Building Supply Co. next door and the row of railroad box cars on the Metropolitan Branch of the Baltimore & Ohio nearby."

The box cars were lined with the crowds of curious who had climbed atop them. Hundreds of others milled around in the tangled underbrush which surrounded the quarter-of-a-block structure. They had a difficult time dodging the streams of water which came from all directions.

Police arrested Clark Brown, 45-year-old colored man, who lived in a shack on the property and was hired to act as night watchman. He was discovered, according to police, wandering around the lot, and was locked up in the Twelfth Precinct station on an open charge.

The origin of the fire could not be determined.

Girl Made a Member Of 'Schoolboy Patrol'

A girl has joined the "schoolboy patrol" of the Cook School, and beginning Monday, she will direct traffic at Seventeenth and Euclid streets northwest.

The girl is Marjorie Ada May Conn, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Whitman Conn, 2400 Thirteenth street northwest. Behind Marjorie's appointment is a story.

During the recent cold snap, it was reported last night, several of the boys in the patrol "couldn't take it," and they turned in their badges and white Sam Brown belts. Whereupon some of the girls—perhaps to humiliate them—volunteered to take their places.

And so, hot or cold, snow or shine, Marjorie Conn will be bossing motorists at Seventeenth and Euclid streets Monday morning.

Forum Speech Finally Is Given In Socialist Hall

Members of the Capital City Forum finally succeeded in discussing "Academic Freedom" last night in a room hired from the Socialist Party, with pictures of Karl Marx and Eugene V. Debs prominent behind the speakers' platform.

A previous effort to hold the discussion on November 22 had been halted by the police, who said the building, 1502 Fourteenth street northwest, could not be occupied unless a fire escape were built on the third floor.

The fire escape was in evidence last night, and the speaker, Prof. Ralph Bunche, of Howard University's history department, said:

"I didn't know the subject was sufficiently hot to require a fire escape."

"The proper objective of education is to expose the learner to every field of knowledge, but to leave him free to make his own choices."

Night parking on 73 miles of 49 streets was forbidden from January 1 to March 1 by the District Commissioners yesterday.

The order is similar to that in effect last year. It is designed to keep the streets along which street cars and buses and large volume of traffic operate free from parked cars so snow may be removed more easily. This year the ban was extended 18 miles. It is effective from 2 a. m. until 8 a. m.

Truckers Hit Van Duzer's Parking Ban

Service in Rush Hours Is Vital to Business, Firms Declare.

Concerns Say Regulation Would Increase Congestion.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer's proposed effort to speed up Washington traffic by limiting truck loading and unloading privileges during rush hours met with scathing attack from truckers and merchants last night.

Van Duzer had proposed a regulation forbidding trucks to stop on certain streets (about 35 miles in all) to load or unload goods between 8 a. m. and 9:30 a. m., and between 4 p. m. and 6 p. m. Parking of private vehicles is now prohibited on those streets during those hours.

Van Duzer would have exempted only the downtown streets and would have limited stopping there only to the actual period of delivery.

Deliveries Vital.

Truckers and merchants packed the liquor board room of the District Building last night to assert that deliveries at those hours were vital to business.

"This is a regulation which would render our service impossible and if applied would cause such congestion during the rest of the day that it would actually make the situation worse," Edward S. Brashears, counsel for the District Trucking Association, said.

The result was that George W. Offutt, chairman of the Traffic Advisory Council, who had called the hearing, finally asked the truckers to contribute their own suggestions.

William E. Humphreys, president of the truckers' group, said "Don't place any more restrictions on us, but for God's sake enforce the ones you have now and help us to get our trucks in to the curb, to the loading zones where they're supposed to be."

Individual truckers promised to co-operate by seeing to it that their men would no longer park at angles to the curb or parallel to street-car loading platforms.

Among those who protested the proposed regulation were James G. Yaden, president of the District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, and Ringgold Hart, counsel of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Firm Costs to Increase.

Hart submitted results of a questionnaire answered by 71 local firms operating 1,499 trucks. Sixty-six firms said they were "required" to make deliveries in those hours.

The proposed regulation, 14 firms estimated, would cost them $119,930 a year in hiring new help and adding extra trucks. Individuals present supplemented this by saying they would have to pass the extra cost on to the consumer, and also asserted more trucks would congest local streets during the hours from 9:30 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Hart's questionnaire also showed 40 out of 50 firms saying it was necessary for them to receive deliveries during the rush hours.

G. O. P. Women Stress Need for Organizing

Clipping Bureau, Farm Family Contacts, Proposed at Meeting.

Organization rather than a definite plan of action was described as the most important work for Republican women within the next few months by several speakers yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia.

Only activities recommended were the formation of a clipping bureau to collect and send out articles on potential Presidential candidates and the contacting of farm women who, in turn, are expected to influence farmers against the AAA program.

Of the First Ladies invited to the meeting yesterday at the Mayflower only one, Mrs. W. Frank Knox, was able to attend. She sat at the speakers' table and smiled politely whenever applause followed the mention of her husband, a Chicago publisher, as the next occupant of the White House.

The names of Borah, Dickinson, Landon, Vandenburg, Mills and Hoover were mentioned in the same connection. Each drew a quota of handclaps.

Speakers Listed.

Speakers were Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, president of the Republican Women of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Elmer O. Leatherwood, widow of the Representative from Utah; Mrs. William Fitch Kelley, president of the District league, and the following national committeewomen: Mrs. Virginia White Speel for the District of Columbia, Mrs. Murray Boocock for Virginia, Mrs. F. G. Tallman for Delaware, and Mrs. Calvin Gabriel for Maryland.

Mrs. Speel, who started to read her speech and then tossed her paper aside so she could "really express herself," said the formulating of any definite plan at this time is impossible because "with these tremendous changes constantly occurring, no man or woman can say what will come tomorrow. We must organize and organize and organize."

Mrs. Kelley, at the close of the lengthly program of speeches, said she is convinced criticism levelled at the national committee has been inspired by discrimination against women members.

"While the committeemen from the nine States represented at the Grass Roots conference last summer held a caucus meeting one morning, the committeewomen were not asked to attend. Yet it is to the women of the national committee to whom we look for guidance," said the president of the District league.

Woman for President.

Mrs. Gabriel declared she is in favor of a woman for president.

"What woman," she asked, "would have ordered thousands of little pigs destroyed? What woman would have had acre after acre plowed under, then imported things from other countries?"

Mrs. Lorimer cited the recent Republican results in the Philadelphia election as positive proof that the people "now feel the country would be safer in Republican hands."

Mrs. Bobcock, of Virginia, started off with a parody on Paul Revere's ride, in which she warned the Nation of New Deal dangers. She ended with a prayer for success of the Republican campaign.

Mrs. Tallman, of Delaware, predicted the "inflation bubble" would soon burst, and said the creed of the Democrats seemed to be "the future be damned and the Constitution for the dogs."

Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of former Vice President Curtis, in an impromptu speech, declared "the complete dishonor of platform promises shows the inability of Roosevelt to lead this country out of its difficulties."

Mrs. Leatherwood reported that "the West is waking up."

It was Mrs. Leatherwood who recommended the District League start a clipping bureau so women far from Washington may learn what is being printed concerning their probable favorite candidates.

Among the guests at yesterday's meeting were Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, wife of the former Secretary of War, and Mrs. Henry P. Fletcher, wife of the chairman of the Republican national committee. Mrs. Kelley presided.

'Protest' Potatoes To Sprout on Lawns

Angry with the AAA's potato control act, several prominent Republican women plan to grow "protest potatoes," it was learned yesterday.

Mrs. Robert L. Bacon, wife of the Representative, will plant her crop in the front lawn of her home at 1801 F street northwest.

Mrs. George Horace Lorimer will do her potato farming at her Philadelphia home.

It was Mrs. Bacon who said that Secretary Wallace would be "sure to see" her protest potatoes. However her home is not on Wallace's route from his home at Wardman Park Hotel to the Department of Agriculture.

The protest intentions were made yesterday at a meeting of Republican women from the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Choir Is Invited To Yule Festival

Roosevelt Requests Group for Tree Ceremony.

At the request of President Roosevelt, the Lincoln Cathedral Choir of the University of Nebraska has been invited to participate in the song festival that will be one of the features of the annual Christmas tree lighting December 24 in Lafayette Park, it was announced last night.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt are scheduled to arrive at 5 p. m. for the final 30 minutes of the program.

The Marine Band will play a concert beginning at 4:30 p. m. A chorus of 50 voices of the singers of the Franciscan Friars from the Monastery in Brookland will also take part in the program under the direction of the Rev. Bonaventure Simon, O. F. M.

M'Neil Denied A New Trial; Will Appeal

Court Deaf to Lawyers' Attack on Verdict in Bank Case.

Ex-Cashier Faces Sentence on Friday on Two Counts.

The District Jail was sealed more tightly than ever upon 42-year-old Benedict M. McNeil, one-time cashier of the ill-fated Park Savings Bank, after his defense attorneys late yesterday lost a motion for a new trial.

Last week, on Thanksgiving Eve, a jury of ten men and two women had adjudged tall, weary-looking McNeil guilty of two offenses—the first, that he had conspired to steal $50,000 of the bank's moneys, and the second, that he had conspired to embezzle the $50,000 as well.

Technicalities Argued.

It might have been one of the offenses, in theory, James F. Reilly, defense counsel, argued; it could not, even in theory, have been both. For larceny, he said, is a trespass, and would have to be committed by an outsider, and embezzlement would have to be committed by a servant.

Assistant District Attorney John J. Wilson contended the indictment was valid, that both offenses had been committed.

As Defense Attorneys Reilly and Robert E. Lynch leaned forward eagerly, Justice F. Dickinson Letts dashed their hopes.

"Motion of the defense overruled," he said.

McNeil stayed in jail, where he has been since the jury returned its verdict last Wednesday night. He faces a maximum sentence of four years in prison and a fine of $20,000.

Sentence Likely Friday.

Sentence will be handed down in District Supreme Court probably on the next sentence day. That will be next Friday.

After that——

Defense Attorney Reilly, questioned last night, said:

"Of course we'll appeal immediately to the Court of Appeals."

The Park Savings Bank closed during the banking holiday of March, 1933. When bank examiners checked its books they refused it permission to reopen. It went into receivership with debts of more than $2,500,000.

McNeil had left the bank in 1929 to join his father, Alexander McNeil, a broker, in the real estate business.

Early in 1934, a grand jury indicted him on the charges of conspiracy, the other alleged conspirators being his father and Robert S. Stunz, vice president of the bank, who committed suicide shortly after the bank closed. The elder McNeil died soon after the indictment, and Benedict McNeil, alone of the three, faced a jury for six days before Justice Letts last week.

Crothers Play Is Feature on Screen at Fox

Ed Sullivan Is Stage Star; Strong Cast at Earle; Other Bills.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"SPLENDOR." Samuel Goldwyn picturization for United Artists of a screen play by Rachel Crothers, starring Miriam Hopkins, with Joel McCrea, Paul Cavanagh, Helen Westley, Billie Burke, David Niven, Katharine Alexander, Ruth Weston, Ivan Simpson, Arthur Treacher and Reginald Sheffield. Directed by Elliott Nugent. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

It is quite a stage show that The Post's amiable "Broadway" sophisticate, Mr. Ed Sullivan, has brought into Loew's Fox Theater this week.

Not that it is staged with a completely devastating sumptuousness, or that it sweeps one out into the aisle with the tempestuous speed of its presentation, but rather because it discloses a remarkable wealth of talent and reveals the dapper Mr. Sullivan as an entertainment engineer who propels his vehicle with a constantly accelerated liveliness until it ends on a note of gay and breezy frivolity that wins a rousing round of applause from the clients out front.

To initiate the carefree goings-on, Mr. Sullivan introduces Virginia Lee and the Lathrop Brothers in an interval of dance that possesses the distinction of appearing to be simplicity itself. As a matter of fact, the precision routines of the Lathrop lads and the tap dancing of Miss Lee approach the ultimate in complexity. That they are made to appear to be tossed off with no effort whatever merely serves as a tremendously eloquent tribute to the skill of the trio who execute them. Miss Lee, by the way, is a blonde with considerably more to commend her than the mere tapping of her toes.

Bill Brady Is Back.

Next comes Bill Brady, the capable young vocalist who made his start toward the top in the theater on the stage he now graces again. Mr. Brady's contributions to the melody of the occasion include "I Wished on the Moon," "Isn't It a Lovely Day," from Fred Astaire's "Top Hat," and the imitation of Bing Crosby that first gained him recognition.

Jay Seiler, imported, so Mr. Sullivan tells us, from the Palais Royale in New York, is an eccentric acrobatic dancer who begins where most of the others stop. He has perfected a burlesque "Ski Jumper's Nightmare" number on a pair of those semicircular blades that is a gem of grotesque gyration.

Then, from the Central Park Casino, come Jerry Goff and Jack Kerr, two songsters who know their way around the better tunes and lyrics. In an unostentatious and wholly infectious manner they contrive to imitate many noted personalities without precisely letting the customers know that that is what they are doing. And in between times, they really sing! Their John Charles Thomas, Morton Downey and Sanderson and Crumit travesties are richly authentic. And their "Beat of My Heart" is done with true musicianship.

From Greenwich Village's Village Barn comes Barbara Belmore, a diminutive dancer, all done up in magenta powder and white ostrich plumes, who exhibits amazing proficiency as an acrobatic dancer. She can do more on her hands than most succeed in accomplishing on their feet.

Then the hit of the show. Her name is Ella Logan and she is a singer from Glasgow, Scotland, who took on the American manner when she took out her first papers. She stopped the proceedings practically cold in their tracks with "Swing It," "Good-For-Nothing Joe," "I've Lost My Rhythm, I've Lost My Music and I've Lost My Man" and a familiar Harry Lauder number "A Wee Doch and Doris" by way of an encore.

Sullivan's Personal Hit.

Beyond the comparatively simple business of mastering ceremonies, the Sullivan, himself, put on a screen feature fashioned after his "Water Under the Bridge" column that appears regularly in this estimable palladium. During its course, humorously traced through the loudspeaker, we were favored with retrospective glimpses of such favorites of a not too-distant long ago as Wallace Reid in the fight scene in "White-Arm Joe's" gin mill in "The Birth of a Nation," Evelyn Nesbit, Theda Bara, Valentino, Ruth Roland, Pearl White, Lon Chaney in "The Phantom of the Opera"—and he received the biggest hand of all—Tex Rickard, the long-count round in the Dempsey-Tunney fight in Chicago, and numerous other nostalgic items. Mr. Sullivan, an old sports editor himself, agrees with many of us that Mr. Dempsey won back the title that night—but didn't get it due to the stupidity of Mr. Barry, the third man in the ring.

And besides this nimble bit of retrospect, Mr. Sullivan also participates in an amusing cross-fire with his talented stooge, Dave Vine, planted in a stage box, with a "mike" to help him out. Mr. Vine is a very funny young man.

"Splendor" a Worthy Film.

There also is a picture at Loew's Fox this week. It is an extremely well-made and interesting picture bearing the title of "Splendor" and boasting the talents of such eminent artists as Miriam Hopkins, Joel McCrea, John Halliday, Billie Burke, Helen Westley and the considerable number of others whose names appear in the small-type paragraph preceding these vagrant remarks.

"Splendor" deals with the squalor that crowded its way into the lives of a family once great, but now reduced to the doubtful assets of a proud name and a mansion on the avenue.

The story is unfolded with the fine flair for smart dialogue, the niceties of social usage and the savoir faire for which Rachel Crothers, the author, has been noted for years in the theater. There is perhaps no contemporary playwright who has kept so completely abreast of the times and modern styles in entertainment as Miss Crothers.

Her present work perpetuates a reputation that is hardly excelled in the playhouse. It is acted with intelligence and charm by the distinguished roster of players assembled for its visualization.

An Our Gang comedy, "The Sinner"; the Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contributions round out a well-balanced and enjoyable program.

Form a New Screen Alliance

In First National's picturization of John Monk Saunders' story of "I Found Stella Parish," Kay Francis, the star, is supported for the first time by Ian Hunter, who in recent months has contributed fine performances to such excellent pictures as "Jalna" and Max Reinhardt's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." They are shown above in a scene from the film, which opened yesterday as major screen feature at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater.

"I FOUND STELLA PARISH." First National picturization of a story by John Monk Saunders, adapted to the screen by Casey Robinson, starring Kay Francis, with Ian Hunter, Paul Lukas, Jessie Ralph, Sybil Jason, Barton MacLane, Robert Strange, Joseph Sawyer, Eddie Acuff and Walter Kingsford. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy. Reviewed Friday night.

It is one of the quaint inconsistencies of the mercurial medium to which she devotes her throaty talents that Kay Francis should contribute one of her most effective screen performances to a picture that is just a little tawdry.

"I Found Stella Parish" does not want for a lively audience interest, but it does lack the advantage of a premise and motivation free from the cheapness of murder, blackmail, and the sinister influences of the nether world.

Miss Parish, it seems, was a great actress who had reached the heights in London, despite the unfortunate incident in America that caused her to be thrown into jail, where her baby was born.

When the man who had precipitated this crushing and wholly unjust crisis in her life learns of her London success, he hastens to inflict upon her again the terrifying imposts of his viciousness. To evade the threat of a repetition of her earlier disgrace, Stella Parish disappears from London the night of her greatest success. By a mere chance, she is followed back to America by one Keith Lockridge, a newspaperman with an uncanny nose for headlines.

Story Breaks Too Soon.

Not knowing that he has ingratiated himself into the affection of the woman to the point where mere friendly interest is transformed into love, Lockridge cables the story to his London paper. It is wired back to New York and Stella presumes herself once more to be the victim of a man's perfidy.

She drifts to low levels in her profession and then, rediscovered by her London producer, goes on to triumph and happiness with the man who had "turned her up."

One wishes that there might be less of the sordid in the picture that Miss Francis adorns with so perfect an impersonation of the actress who makes every sacrifice to safeguard the happiness of her small daughter.

For the first time within this recollection spanning the flight of the years from young to old woman hood—through the device of disguise and deception, which doesn't deceive the reporter who knows his news, as such things go in the "movies"—Miss Francis gets deeply into the matter of character delineation and makes a rather splendid job of it.

Her small daughter is played with a captivating naturalness by little Miss Sybil Jason, a diminutive actress who may not be a brunette Shirley Temple, but comes dangerously close.

Ian Hunter Scores Again.

Jessie Ralph, in the role of Nana, has less to do than usual, but does what she has with characteristic skill. In the role of Lockridge, Ian Hunter gives an especially engaging account of himself. There is a forthrightness in everything Mr. Hunter does, and a wholesomeness that makes his work particularly agreeable. As was to have been expected, since this is a product of the Warner Brothers factory, Barton MacLane is the play's symbol of cussedness.

The production is one of ultra-modern settings and fine photography and Mr. LeRoy's direction is equal to every dramatic demand of a story that distinctly falls outside the first flight.

On the stage this week Miss Audrey Sieber's task is made unusually light and she is called upon to display only one frock, since she makes only one initial announcement. That one is of Ted Weems and his orchestra.

A Fine Band Act.

Mr. Weems returns to the Capital with as fine an "act" of its kind as has come along. His orchestral numbers are shrewdly managed and his list of specialists is long and handsome. Among them are Frieda Sullivan, one of the most remarkable acrobatic dancers these astigmatic eyes ever have beheld; Parker Gibbs, singer; Helen Jane Behlke, a songstress of whom the crowd last night seemed never to tire—"Red Sails in the Sunset" and "Foolin' With Me" were two of her numbers—Arlene and Norman Selby, a trumpeter who blacks up in full view of the patrons and his feminine partner, a dancer of no mean dimensions; Red Ingle, a comedian-singer-instrumentalist, and probably several, or more, others who have escaped this treacherous memory.

Elmo Tanner's whistling rendition of "Nola" would make Vincent Lopez turn over on his piano stool!

The Paramount News and Freddie Clark's orchestral interludes complete a program that strikes a balance well calculated to engage the interest of a vast number of discriminating show-shoppers.

"THANKS A MILLION." Twentieth Century picturization of a story by Melville Crossman, adapted to the screen by Nunally Johnson, featuring Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak, Fred Allen and Patsy Kelly, with Raymond Walburn, Benny Baker, Allan Dinehart, Paul Whiteman and his band, the Yacht Club Boys, Rubinoff and the Radio Rogues. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Reviewed Friday morning by Isabel Harraman Mangum.

Frothy, breezy and amusing, "Thanks A Million" will prove welcome box-office fare for those who like cinema musicomedies and who feel the urgent need to get their minds off the old Christmas shopping list and the high cost of living.

Here are high politics in a blithe and frolicsome mood and the gentle art of campaigning done to the tune of Paul Whiteman and the Yacht Club Boys.

It concerns one Ned Lyman (Fred Allen) and his troupe of entertainers who are stranded in a small town where a gubernatorial campaign is being started. A. Darius Culliman (Raymond Walburn), the candidate for governor, doesn't seem to be going over in the way his party would like, so Troupe Manager Lyman sells them the idea of pepping up the meetings with his crooner, Eric Land (Dick Powell), his song and dance team, Sally and Phoebe Mason (Ann Dvorak and Patsy Kelly), the Yacht Club Boys and Rubinoff.

The idea goes over in a big way until Crooner Eric Land steals the show and is fired. Then Candidate Culliman take a nip too many before a meeting and doesn't recover in time to meet His Public. Crooner Land is substituted and proves such a happy choice that the party politicians withdraw Culliman and substitute Land on the gubernatorial platform.

This gives Dick Powell a chance to sing some very nice numbers, including "I've Got a Pocket Full of Sunshine," "I'm Sitting High on a Hilltop," "Thanks a Million" and "What a Beautiful Night." Incidentally, Mr. Powell has lost a lot of irritating mannerisms and, although he still remains boyishly ingratiating, his acting has added a long-awaited and welcome touch of maturity and sincerity.

Ann Dvorak furnishes the love interest, while Patsy Kelly and Fred Allen are the bickering wise crackers, without which it seems that no musical comedy would be quite complete. Benny Baker, Andrew Tombes, Allan Dinehart, Paul Harvey and Edwin Maxwell are the big, bad, scheming politicians, and a very lovely lady, whose name we didn't catch, is the love "menace."

Is All in Fun.

It's all in fun, and very good fun, too, although there might be many a dull moment were it not for Paul Whiteman and his band, Rubinoff and his violin and the Yacht Club Boys with their always amusing ditties. These musical interludes do much to oil the wheels of politics. You will particularly enjoy the Yacht Club Boys' rendition of "The Square Deal" and "The Alphabet Song." The boys write their own sophisticated and amusing rhythms and the other song hits are ably done by Gus Kahn and Arthur Johnston.

Added attractions include an Educational short subject, entitled "Gangsters of the Deep," and gives you some rip-snorting shots of man-eating sharks and whales bigger than you ever knew existed. A "Chic" Sale feature called "The Perfect Tribute" makes you feel all tingly and patriotic. The Metrotone News concludes the program.

"THE MELODY LINGERS ON." Reliance Pictures filmization of the novel by Lowell Brenton, adapted to the screen by Ralph Block and Philip Donne, starring Josephine Hutchison and George Houston, supported by Helen Westley, Laura Hope Crews, John Halliday and Mona Barrie. Directed by David Burton. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

You probably won't need all the handkerchiefs you thought you would at this.

It is not another "Madeline Claudet" or "Only Yesterday," but rather a combination of these and bits of all other tragic love stories—such as "The White Sister," "Farewell to Arms"—on an intellectual scale. That is, much of the love story and many of the tears are omitted, making the picture interesting rather than tragic.

Now, we don't like tears, but somehow we would have thought this much better if it had made us just a little weepy at times as it is obviously meant to do.

In bald outline, it is the story of Ann Prescott, young American pianist, studying in Italy, and her love for Carlo Salvini, opera singer. He dies in the war. She leaves their son in a convent, returns there to work to be near him, is forced to leave, loses track of him, but years later finds him again in time to help make him a great singer.

Is Twice Told Tale.

Perhaps it has just been done too often to be very moving any more, or perhaps Director Burton and Josephine Hutchinson are somewhat at fault. For instance, when the great love scene should occur, Burton suddenly switches his camera to a battlefield where a strange mixture of cannon shots and surging music is heard. Miss Hutchinson, whom we remember from Rams Head days here and admire considerably as an actress, lacks entirely that abandon with which Helen Hayes and Margaret Sullivan have carried such a role to really stirring heights. She plays wistfully, attractively, competently, but her approach is always the mental one.

Only that last little scene, as she walks proudly from the opera box hearing her son and her lover jointly praised, reaches through to real feeling.

Support and Supplementaries.

George Houston makes a most auspicious debut as Carlo. He is big, not too handsome, easy, and sings more than pleasantly. Helen Westley, John Halliday, Laura Hope Crews and Mona Barrie give excellent support. The son is played by a young man who resembles Houston in appearance, but not in ease of manner.

On the whole, the picture is handsomely mounted and intelligently handled. Maybe its advance billing as one of these "sweetest love stories ever told" led to our disappointment.

The subsidiaries include an interesting nature real, "The Hermits of Crab Land," which features a fantastic wrestling match between crabs; an unfunny issue of "Dumbbell Letters," another Maj. Bowes' amateur short, and the newsreel.

Columbia

"MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, adapted to the screen by Talbot Jennings, Jules Furthman and Charles Wilson, starring Charles Laughton and Clark Gable, with Franchot Tone, Herbert Mundin, Eddie Quillen, Donald Crisp, Dudley Digges, Henry Stephenson, Spring Byington, DeWitt Jennings, Stanley Fields and Vernon Downing. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Reviewed Friday afternoon (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Out of a strong worded, stark story of the now famous mutiny of H. M. S. Bounty, Tahiti-bound in the mid 1700s on a scientific mission—a tale of the seas so brutal as to seem almost outside the province of cinema translation—there has been created for the screen a drama, replete with all those powerful qualities so pronounced upon the printed page, which must take its place among the truly great representations of marine activities.

Of "Mutiny on the Bounty" much (in these columns, November 13, et sequitur) has been written, and if the two earlier weeks of this picture at Loew's Palace Theater were insufficient to prove that the glowing superlatives of critics and press agents are sometimes mild tribute, then this third week on F street should suffice.

Laughton Dominates Action.

Although he has the habit of dominating his pictures, as the sadistic Capt. Bligh, Charles Laughton here is the picture. The other players merely add an artistic verisimilitude to a limning which at first reflects the nadir of human kindness and later is coldly admired for a display of consummate fortitude.

One hundred thirty-two minutes this picture lasts, 132 minutes of the tensest drama of any recent season. Here is one subject that should be on the "must" list of any astute follower of stage and screen.

"College Capers" presents the Cabin Kids in a brace of songs, and the Metrotone News offers the current events, both of which, while sufficiently diverting, might easily be ignored for the greater grandeur of "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Talent Scouting.

ONE hour and ten minutes after Pilot Dick Merrill had picked the big Douglass plane off the Newark fairway, he set it down again at Washington, turning loose a roadway columnist in the immediate vicinity of the White House. For the next week, this column will be filed from here, while I report on the night life in this section, and do a bit of talent-scouting. Plenty of fine performers are away from the Stem. All these capable youngsters need is an upraised voice to call them to Broadway and stardom . . . Bill Brady, best young singer to come to New York in many seasons, came out of this city not so long ago. He was a freshman at George Washington University here when he won a Bing Crosby contest at Loew's Fox Theater. He moved into New York, clicked at Leon and Eddie's, smash-clicked at N. T. G.'s Paradise . . . The woods are full of these excellent prospects. But Brady is conscious of the fact that the hometown boy who makes good must obey certain conventions: "If you don't mind, Ed," he said last night, "I'd rather wear a dinner jacket than tails at the Loew Fox. The kids who went to school with me might think I was going Broadway if I wore tails and white tie."

• • • •

While I'm on the ground here, I'll see if some other fine prospects aren't available. Bill Grady at M.-G.-M., Miriam Howell at Universal, Joe Pincus at Fox, Katharine Brown at RKO, Oscar Serlin at Paramount, and Mildred Weber at Warner's New York offices, are always eager for new faces. The percentage of youngsters who make good in films is one in 3,000, but the gamble is worth it. These talent scouts of the movies work 24 hours a day at their tasks . . . It was Serlin who signed up Dorothy Dell when she was apparently all washed up. But for her death, she would have been a major flicker name by now . . . Perhaps there's some youngster here who can make the grade, too. I'll be looking for 'em.

• • • •

The airline trip from New York to this magnificent city is extremely interesting. You are startled, for instance, when the skyline of Philadelphia emerges from the vapory mists through which the plane is moving. I never realized Philly had so many tall buildings . . The Princeton Stadium, now that the Tiger pack has gone back to its lair, is chill and dismal, and so, too, is the Havre de Grace Race Track . . . At Wilmington, the mansion in the foreground, with a huge swimming pool, is part and parcel of the Du Pont dynasty . . The surface of Chesapeake Bay seems to be covered with white confetti. The confetti resolves itself, on closer inspection, into thousands of wild ducks.

A few miles east of Baltimore you see the Glenn Martin airplane plant, which built the huge China Clipper. The sister ship to the Clipper is visible on the ground, 6,000 feet below, with smaller planes grouped near it. It looks, from the air, like a mother hen with a brood of chicks . . . You pass near Bolling Field, where ground drafts sucked two Army fliers to their death a few days ago. The tip of the Washington Monument seems almost within reaching distance as you float by. Below is the Capitol of the country, as immaculate in appearance as though the District of Columbia officials had just scrubbed and washed it in the waters of the Potomac . . . With hardly a perceptible jolt, Merrill eases the 14-passenger Douglas to the ground, and after his Washington passengers leave, starts off again for Miami.

The Washington Post and other big papers here devote most of Page 1, naturally, to political news. Stories that are played up in New York reduce here to a few sticks of type. But New York and other cities treat one topic in the same manner. The Dionne quintuplets are just as popular away from the metropolis, and command equal space in the Capital journals. About the only thing the Quins haven't crashed now that they are emoting for Hollywood, is the Congressional Record. I don't think they have been extolled in that ponderous sheet, but then again, I may be wrong. I'll have to check with Doris Fleeson and John O'Donnell.

Wounded Man Still Unlinked To Bank Holdup

By the Associated Press.

Martins Ferry, Ohio, Dec. 6.—Police officials sped 200 miles across the State today in a futile effort to link a wounded man with the spectacular robbery of a Franklin (Ohio) bank.

Leaving the faded trail of two fugitives, one wounded, the officers turned to questioning one of five persons abducted by the robbers in their wild flight from Franklin, where a companion died and a marshal was wounded in a brief pistol skirmish preceding their escape with $2,880.

A. C. Pingleton and Paul Clark, jr., both of Middletown, Ohio, and Frank Morelli, orchestra leader of Springfield, Ohio, were brought here by Col. Lynn Black, of the State highway patrol and all failed to identify James N. Gault, 22 in a local hospital with a shoulder wound.

Gault was brought to the hospital at 9 o'clock last night and said he had wounded himself accidentally. Morelli said the fleeing robbers released him in Columbus a few minutes before nine. Columbus is more than 100 miles west of here.

Officers sought to learn why Morelli delayed two hours in reporting his release. Col. Black said Morelli told him he did not notify Columbus officers because traffic there was heavy and he could find no place to park his car. He drove to Springfield, 45 miles from Columbus, to report his release.

Relapse Suffered By Mrs. Livermore

By the Associated Press.

Santa Barbara, Calif., Dec. 6.—Dr. A. G. Spaulding, physician attending Mrs. Dorothea Longcope, said tonight his patient had suffered a relapse attributed to "a message which upset her." He would not amplify his statement.

Mrs. Longcope suffered from nervous shock after she wounded her son, Jesse Livermore, jr., at a Tranksgiving Day party. She has been charged with attempted murder.

Harrison Ryon, attorney for Mrs. Longcope, refused to comment on a report that her youngest son, Paul Livermore, told her he intended to go East for a time with his father, Jesse Livermore, sr., Wall Street speculator.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6 (A.P.).—The 1935 college football season, one of the most spectacular of postwar years, has produced an all-America team qualified in nearly every respect to take its place among the most accomplished in the gridiron hall of fame.

The pick of the country's talent lines up today in mythical formation, answering the eleventh annual Associated Press roll call and bringing to a climax the collegiate career of many a distinguished athletic son of the old alma mater.

This year's selections, based upon a consensus of expert views and opinions in all parts of the Nation, reflect the sensational strides made on Southern gridirons, particularly in Texas. The far-flung battleground of Dixie, stretching from the Carolinas to the Lone Star State, shares with the equally copious Middlewest the distinction of developing a bumper crop of all-America performers in the 1935 campaign. Simultaneously the East and Far West, although producing a few fine teams, have lost ground in the all-star scramble.

East Qualifies Pair.

The South gains four of the 11 places on the first team, with two each coming from the Southeastern and Southwest Conference groups. Big Ten football furnishes three selections on behalf of the Middlewest, The East and Far West each place two men.

Three players stand out as just about the unanimous choice of the country for all-America recognition. Two of them, Stanford's Bobby Grayson, a fullback, and Captain Darrell Lester, Texas Christian's giant center, won their all-America spurs last year and demonstrated all this season that they belong at the head of the class. Each rose to great heights under pressure. The third is John Jacob (Jay) Berwanger, famous as Chicago's "one-man backfield" and without doubt the greatest all-around back the Big Ten has known since the palmy days of Red Grange.

Berwanger, as a matter of cold statistical fact, can do many more things well than Grange, such as

A. A. U. Chiefs Put Boycott To Vote

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—After wrestling all day with the highly-charged issue of American participation in the 1936 Olympic games, the executive committee of the Amateur Athletic Union decided tonight to place it squarely before the open assembly of the annual convention tomorrow.

The committee, with President Jeremiah T. Mahoney in the chair, voted 10 to 5 to refer to the convention, without recommendation, a strongly-worded resolution condemning Germany's alleged discrimination against Jewish athletes and calling upon the A. A. U. to withdraw support from, as well as actively to oppose holding, the Olympics in Berlin.

Follows Deadlock.

This vote followed a deadlock on the motion to refer the resolution "favorably" to the floor of the convention. The committee ballots showed seven members favoring and seven opposing a definite stand on the Olympic boycott issue, with President Mahoney casting the tying vote for the anti-Nazi group after Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer, refrained from voting.

The committee's vote revealed sharply drawn lines and forecast a bitter battle of words and ballots tomorrow when close to 200 delegates from 34 district A. A. U. associations in all parts of the United States consider an issue that is loaded with athletic explosives.

Outcome in Doubt.

The outcome obviously was in doubt, but it was equally clear, during the preliminary jockeying for positions, that the forces opposed to sending an American Olympic team to Germany had gained substantial ground. Avery Brundage, of Chicago, president of the American Olympic committee, changed his mind after asserting earlier that the delegates would vote 2 to 1 in favor of participating in the Berlin games.

Although insisting that the United States will send a fully representative team abroad, regardless of A. A. U. action, Brundage admitted tonight the opposition was stronger than he had anticipated. He charged that "heavy pressure" was being brought to bear by interests not directly concerned with American athletics, but determined to oppose the Olympics on anti-Nazi grounds. Meanwhile leaders in the move to keep America out of the Olympics, if they are held in Germany, claimed flatly they would get a majority vote in the convention.

To Certify Athletes.

Some of the effect of the proposed resolution, however, was extracted by President Mahoney's declaration that the A. A. U. would certify American athletes for the Olympics regardless of the organization's stand on the German issue. This, in effect, was a reply to Brundage's assertion that the American Olympic committee would certify the athletes, for Olympic competi-

Pittsburgh Teams War Over Grid Cup

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 6.—A "civil war" broke out in Pittsburgh tonight over the questions—

The $1,500 cup was awarded by city council in 1928, before Duquesne "grew up" in a football way. The inscription on the trophy reads:

"To be contested for annually between the teams representing the University of Pittsburgh and Carnegie Institute of Technology."

The cup has become a symbol of the city championship.

This year Duquesne is generally hailed the champion. The Dukes beat Carnegie Tech, 7 to 0. Carnegie and Pitt played a scoreless tie. Pitt and Duquesne did not play.

Pitt, which has held the cup since 1929, refuses to turn it over to Duquesne, pointing to the inscription and asserting, "we tied Carnegie."

Mayor William N. McNair says if Duquesne wants to bring legal action he will give his services as an attorney free.

Strictly Baseball.

IF the truth be known, Bill Werber, the local boy who made good with the Red Sox, would welcome any trade that would remove him from the sphere of influence of Joe Cronin . . . Werber, who held a cordial dislike for Cronin when the latter was with Washington, has never wholly warmed to Cronin even though the $250,000 shortstop became his manager . . . and he is said not to be keen about playing alongside Cronin in the Boston infield . . . Cronin's slowness in covering the shortstop territory toward third base reflects on Werber's play, according to the latter's friends.

POVICH.

There is no encouraging news for Washington's unsigned ball players in the fact that Clark Griffith is contemplating a reduction in salary for his entire office force . . . including himself and his $30,000 yearly stipend . . . contrary to general impression, the Washington Club does not lease the refreshment concessions, but reaps the entire profit from them . . . the only Washington player certain of a raise in salary for 1936 is Buddy Myer . . . but Buck Newsom, who was given an $800 per month increase after he was purchased from the Browns, will battle strenuously for a raise . . . the fact that Heinie Manush is the highest-paid performer on the Washington club will not facilitate any swap in which he might figure.

Goose Goslin's release by the Washington club at the end of the pennant-winning season of 1933 was engendered by an incident in the clubhouse toward the fag-end of the campaign . . . when Goslin, informed by Manager Cronin that he would not be in the starting line-up that day, turned his back on Cronin in a huff, stretched himself on the rubbing table as the players filed out on the field, and announced to Cronin: "I'm taking a nap. If you need a pinch hitter, send for me and I might come out there."

THE word has gone out from President Will Harridge of the American League to Umpire in Chief Tom Connolly that hereafter he shall recommend no short umpires for engagement by the league . . . such diminutive arbiters as Bill Summers and Bill McGowan are handicapped by their inability to see over even a crouching catcher when working behind the plate . . . Umpire George Moriarty, who has declared that he will officiate in no more World Series because the pay is insufficient, need not worry on that score . . . out of consideration for the National League, which was on the wrong end of every crucial decision by Moriarty in the last World Series, the American League will not have the effrontery to nominate Moriarty for the World Series again.

Night baseball will be voted by the American League in its Chicago meeting next week, but no club except the St. Louis Browns is expected to inaugurate the nocturnal games . . . the other clubs are perfectly willing to share in the receipts of night games abroad but do not want to encourage night games at home . . . the Montreal Royals netted $47,000 profit from their 1935 season, which is more than half of the American League clubs grossed . . . the Washington club suffered its worst season, financially, in the last ten years.

By participating in more than 100 games for 11 consecutive seasons, Mickey Cochrane this year tied the major league record established by Ray Schalk . . . and Lou Gehrig, who has batted in 150 or more runs during five years of his career, can equal Babe Ruth's record if he produces that number for one more season . . . Bucky Harris breaks right down and admits that the greatest mistake in his 11-year managerial career was his trade of Lyn Lary to the St. Louis Browns in exchange for Alan Strange . . . and calls Lary the best shortstop in the American League today.

THE Griffith Stadium press box atop the roof of the stands behind home plate has been condemned by the city Fire Department and will be removed to the front section of the upper deck, where it was formerly located . . . Nick Altrock was named by Hugh Fullerton on the All-Time Chicago team in preference to Doc White, who also makes his home in Washington . . . Claude Linton, the catcher for whom Joe Cambria traded five Albany players to the Dallas club, will probably be taken South for a tryout with the Nats . . . and Freddie Sington, the All-America tackle, who was an All-America flop as a major league outfielder, will be traded by Chattanooga to Little Rock, of the Southern Association.

If Scout Joe Engel had not missed a train in New Orleans, the Nats could have signed Buddy Myer for $1,000 in 1924 instead of the $25,000 it cost 'em to buy his contract from New Orleans later in the season . . . and when Clark Griffith announced that he had bought a shortstop named Cronin from Kansas City for $7,500 in 1928, he couldn't remember Cronin's first name . . . Jack Bentley, who pitched the seventh game of the World Series for the Giants against Washington in 1924, broke into the majors with the Nats back in 1919 in answer to a want-ad inserted in The Post by Clark Griffith as a publicity stunt.

Bucky Harris will listen with attentive ears to any trade that the White Sox broach if a Joe Kuhel-Zeke Bonura swap is involved . . . with the Washington pitching looming no better than in 1935, the Nats are hard after added hitting strength, which Bonura represents . . . Eddie Collins, general manager of the Red Sox, and a great hand at spending Tom Yawkey's money, already has closed the deal which will bring Jimmy Foxx, Roger Cramer and Eric McNair to Boston, most baseball men are confident.

25,000 to See Terps Oppose Terrors

Maryland Is 7-5 Favorite in State Title Clash at Baltimore.

A FOOTBALL rivalry boasting the antiquity of a grandfather's clock and the genuine ferocity of a hill billies' feud will be resumed today at Baltimore, where Maryland and its ancient State foe, Western Maryland, clash in the grand finale of the East's 1935 grid season.

A record crowd for a strictly all-State attraction, estimated at 25,000, is expected to see the game, which will determine the championship of the Calvert country for another season. On paper Maryland, with its superior backfield forces, rates a 7-5 favorite, but the Terps will have to do better than crawl to win.

Much of the battle undoubtedly will be fought in the air as both teams have potent passing attacks and the Green Terrors undoubtedly will depend on aerials as their principal method of motivation. "Sunshine" Campbell, burly halfback, will be on the dispatching end of the Terrors' passes, while Charley Ellinger and Coleman Headley will heave them for the Old Liners.

Both elevens have capable pass receivers in their ends, Vic Willis, given honorable mention on several All-American teams, and Louis Ennis, of Maryland, and Lou Lassahn and Stan Benjamin, of Western Maryland. It was the splendid work of the Terror wingmen that enabled their alma mater to come from behind and defeat Georgetown last week.

Western Maryland boasts a slight edge in line power, but this probably will be offset by Maryland's superior backs. Led by Bill Guckeyson, an All-Conference selection, the Terp ball-carrying corps is one of the finest in the East. Guckeyson's two long runs, one for 50 yards, the other a 90-yard runback of a kick-off, gave the Old Liners their margin of victory over Georgetown.

In Ellinger, Gormley, Stonebraker, Sachs, Wheeler and Headley, Guckeyson will have a supporting cast that easily can steal the spotlight from him. All are fast, shifty and hard running back. They have played consistently good football this season and can be expected to ring down the curtain with a flourish of real football.

Western Maryland has a District boy in its backfield in "Bull" Draper, former Western High School star, who replaced Bill Shepherd at fullback. Campbell, Lathrop and Brennan round out the starting quartet.

Irish Elect Smith, Injured All Year

By the United Press.

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 6.—William R. Smith, Hacketstown, N. J., 165-pound guard, who was unable to play this year because of illness, today was elected captain of the 1936 Notre Dame football team.

Smith was a regular on the 1934 eleven but underwent an operation shortly before the 1935 season opened.

Varsity monograms were awarded to 33 players, including Joseph Sullivan, New York, captain-elect for 1935, who died last March. Coach Elmer Layden said the sweater would be sent to his mother.

Cooper Leads Orlando Golf; Mackenzie in Tie for Fourth

By the Associated Press.

ORLANDO, Fla., Dec. 6.—Lightborse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, shot to the front at the half-way mark of the $2,000 Orlando Open Golf Tournament today with a 69 that duplicated his first-round score and left him two strokes to the good at 138.

Slashing par with a brilliant 33 on the out nine, he forged past the first-round pace setter, Tony Manero, of Greensboro, N. C.

Manero faltered, took a 72 and had no better than a tie for second with Johnny Revolta, of Milwaukee, the Professional Golfers Association champion. Revolta's 140 was earned on a masterful exhibition of shotmaking that brought him a 68 for the round, three strokes under conventional figures.

Trailing Manero and Revolta by a stroke were Ky Laffoon, of Chicago; Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., and Roland MacKenzie, of Washington.

Gene Kunes, of Philadelphia, Canadian Open titleholder, turned in a 68 that tied Revolta's sensational round, but he was forced to share the spot at 142 with a 19-year-old amateur, Claude Harmon, of Orlando, and Ray Horan, professional at the Orlando Country Club, where the tournament is being played.

A sensation of the first round on the strength of his 69, Horan took a 73 today.

Auburn Gets Bid if Vandy Declines

North Carolina Also in Orange Bowl Picture, Says Phillips.

By the United Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 6.—If Vanderbilt does not accept the Orange Bowl invitation by tomorrow, Auburn will be asked to come to Miami in its place.

W. Keith Phillips, chairman of the Orange Bowl committee, tonight told the United Press he would give "Vanderbilt one more day in which to answer yes or no."

"And if they don't accept tomorrow," Phillips said, "we still stop waiting for them to make up their minds. We can't wait until the middle of the month, with the game New Year's Day, for Vandy to answer—particularly when the answer might be no."

Catholic University of Washington has accepted an invitation to represent the North in the annual North-South post-season game.

Dr. L. C. Glenn, chairman of Vanderbilt's athletic committee, today said the Nashville school has not received a formal invitation.

Sent by Governor.

"I don't know how an invitation could be more formal than the one we've sent Vanderbilt," Phillips said when told of Glenn's statement. "Both Gov. Dave Scholtz and I have asked Chancellor Kirkland to send his team here for the game. We've had telephone and telegraph communications with at least five people at the school.

"We seriously reopened negotiations today with Auburn. They made an offer and I made a counter proposition," he said. "And I'm sure we can get together.

"Then, too, North Carolina entered the picture, and we've asked them exactly how interested they would be in coming down."

Cards Start Practice Tomorrow for Game

While the enthused football squad continued to indulge in day dreams of sun-swept Miami shores, and maybe a sun-kissed bathing beauty or two, Head Coach Dutch Bergman yesterday settled down to the serious business of preparing his troupe for the trek to Florida, where it will meet a Southern opponent in the annual Orange Bowl New Year's game.

The Cardinals' opponent has yet to be selected, but their coach is satisfied that either of the two potential rivals—Vanderbilt or Auburn—will be plenty tough, and he intends to be fully prepared for them.

Practice will be resumed Monday, although the entire squad, rigged out in full uniform, will be out on the field this afternoon for the benefit of cameramen. Light workouts an hour a day will be the program next week. There may be a scrimmage with the freshmen the latter part of the week; if not, there will be scrimmage the following week.

Levinsky's Sister Held in Hospital

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 6.—Lena Krakow, better known as "Leaping Lena," sister and co-manager of Heavyweight Boxer King Levinsky, of Chicago, was confined at the Psycopathic Hospital today pending action on a petition to have her declared insane.

The petition filed in county court by Sam Levinsky, another brother, was accompanied by a certificate by Dr. Francis J. Gerty, recommending she be held for a hearing next Wednesday.

The family's action, Brother Sam said, was caused by her recent activities in Washington and elsewhere in connection with contracts for the Kingfish. Four months ago police were called to a hotel after she went down a fire escape allegedly under the influence of "knock-out drops." She and Daniel Levy, were divorced last year and she was given her maiden name of Krakow.

Tangora, Honored, Fulfilled Promise

Paul Tangora, Northwestern University guard, who today is honored with a post on the 1935 All-America team announced by the Associated Press, fulfilled the promise he displayed as a schoolboy star on Washington gridirons.

The husky Tangora was a towering figure among District schoolboy stars when he performed for the Devitt Prep and St. John's teams here in 1927-28-29-30.

A bruising type of player who combined his natural strength with speed and agility, Tangora won national fame in the Northwestern-Notre Dame game when he recovered two Notre Dame fumbles that paved the way for Northwestern's stunning 14-7 victory.

Waswanappi, $35.40 Shot, Wins by Length at Charles Town

4,000 Watch Repeal Run Second

Benham Rides Winner; Daily Double Pays Only $23.70.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN RACE TRACK, W. Va., Dec. 6.—Waswanappi, a 4-year-old, made a runaway of the scheduled feature race at this mountain race track today. The oddly named son of Marcellas and Fair Cuba coasted to the finish line a length in advance of Repeal and two and a half lengths ahead of Hot Griddle. Five other alleged race horses were stretched out at various intervals along the stretch.

Having shown little in races or trials since being shipped here from Bowie, Waswanappi was despised by the majority of bettors, but those few who proved faithful were rewarded with a $35.40 mutuel. And those who invested had no anxious moments.

With Jockey Eddie Benham, a rather unfashionable rider, in the saddle, Waswanappi fairly shot out of No. 1 starting gate and made no mistakes. Benham guided him along the rail all the way to take the shortest way home. Repeal moved up menacingly at the stretch turn but Benham simply let out another notch.

Weather Better.

The day was the most pleasant of the meeting. A bright sun shone on the winners and the losers and both the attendance, some 4,000, and the betting, more than $45,000, were the best of the meeting.

A short price marked the daily double. The combination of Tolimata and Dolente produced a $23.20 mutuel. The pool was the largest of the week, $3,088 being passed through the windows.

The most thrilling finish of the meeting came in the third race when four horses made a dive for the wire at almost the same instant. It was the second half of the daily double and the judges called Dolente the winner, Black Ribbon second and By Surprise third. The three were noses apart, with Wee Broom, the fourth horse, only a head away.

Luke Phantom, the property of T. A. Sears, took the first race at a $9.40 mutuel. The son of Lucullite scored a head decision over the Washington combination of Povel, trained by Selby Burch and ridden by Jockey Jimmy Sullivan. Kathleen F. was third in the field of eight. Luke Phantom swung wide at every turn and then withstood a long drive to barely last. Povel had to go to the extreme outside entering the stretch and came on too late.

Tolimata Gains.

A $3.60 favorite, Cantersine, won the fourth race from Big Dipper, Debbie and five others. The daughter of Canter broke behind Big Dipper but took command at the far turn and held sway thereafter. Ray Broker, the diminutive colored boy, was in the saddle and it was his first winner of the meeting.

Miss Catalan won the sixth, closing with a rush through the stretch after being far back the first half. She was just up in time to win. Miss Catalan paid $7 for $2. B. F. Christmas' Ogle was second and Apathy third.

Plain Ace led all the way to win the seventh by four lengths. He paid $15 for $2. St. Christopher just lasted to beat the favorite, Brown Wren, for the place.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LUKE PHANTOM, $9.40, $3.80, $2.40; POVEL, $3.80, $2.60; KATHLEEN F., $2.40.

LUKE PHANTOM, displaced after going a half-mile, moved back into the lead midway of the final turn, bore out badly, carrying POVEL with him entering the home stretch, continued strongly under punishment and barely lasted long enough. POVEL, strongly handled and kept in close pursuit of the leaders, gained steadily in the last quarter-mile and was wearing the winner down readily after being carried very wide into the home stretch. KATHLEEN F. was vigorously ridden from the beginning, assumed a short lead after a half-mile, but was unable to stay when the real test came. SALLANDRY saved ground all the way and had no excuses. LA MARQUISE could not threaten. CHANNING showed early speed. MARY E. ran out badly all the way.

SECOND RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start poor. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:07. Off at 2:12. Winner, J. W. McIntyre's ch. f. (3) by Lerner—Tollmata. Trained by C. Frost. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:15 2-5 1:22.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOLIMATA, $6.80, $2.80, $2.60; RADIATOR $3.60, $3.00; PRINCE PETTIE, $9.20.

TOLIMATA, taken to the outside after reaching the back stretch, went to the leaders when leaving the back stretch, wore RADIATOR down at the stretch turn, and came out steadily under a drive. RADIATOR raced FOREST CHARM into submission after a half-mile, saved ground, but could not resist the winner when hard urged. PRINCE PETTIE closed with good speed after being slow to gain full stride. OUR TIME was under strong pressure and had no excuses. RED WARRIOR broke slowly and was never a factor. FOREST CHARM stopped after having early speed. AUSELP refused to extend herself after breaking poorly and was pulled up. CURRANTS wheeled when the break came.

THIRD RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:39. Off at 2:42. Winner, C. J. Meister's b. f. (3), by Dozer—Valentia. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:14 3-5 1:22.

MISS SYMPHONY	111	7	8	8	8	8	8	Johnson	77.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOLENTE, $6.00, $4.40, $3.80; BLACK RIBBON $11.60, $6.80; BY SURPRISE, $4.80.

DOLENTE, a keen factor from the start, drew abreast of the leaders midway of the home stretch after coming to the outside, closed strongly and was up in the closing strides. BLACK RIBBON went into a short lead midway of the back stretch, was strongly handled, and held on with good courage. BY SURPRISE, kept under stout urging, responded to punishing command saved ground and fought it out tenaciously. WEE BROOM skirted the inner rail entering the home stretch and finished fastest of all. BRAMBLE RUN was racing gamely after beginning slowly. NERVY NELLA could not reach contention.

FOURTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:10. Off at 3:12½. Winner, A. E. Matthews' ch. f. (4) by Canter—Thomasine. Trained by A. Forehand. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:01 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTERSINE, $3.60, $2.80 $2.40; BIG DIPPER, $9.80, $4.40; DEBBIE, $3.40.

CANTERSINE, away nicely and racing close to BIG DIPPER, took command when leaving the back stretch, saved ground, then, holding on strongly under punishment barely lasted to win. BIG DIPPER came again after losing command and was wearing the winner down steadily at the close. DEBBIE, forced to race from the outside finished in determined fashion after losing ground entering the home stretch. NORA'S GRACE raced strongly but could not improve her position. CHATERESS closed with a belated rush. FOLLOW ON had no mishaps. CONVENTIONAL was outrun and pulled up very lame. GENUINE ran out after the break and was pulled up.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:41. Off at 3:42. Winner, L. E. Aislon Stable's blk. c. (4), by Bucolas—Fair Cuba. Trained by P. Kearns. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time 0:25, 0:50 1-5, 1:16 2-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:49 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WASWANAPPI, $35.40, $14.00 $5.40; REPEAL, $4.80, $3.40; HOT GRIDDLE, $3.80.

WASWANAPPI outran his field to the first turn, withstood stiff contention from SWAGGERSTICK and HOT GRIDDLE, then held on strongly to withstand REPEAL. Latter went to the outside when engaging the leaders, drew on almost even terms with the winner a furlong from the finish, but hung approaching the end. HOT GRIDDLE forced a steady pace while saving ground, but weakened during the last five-sixteenths. PORPHYRY gained stoutly in the last half-mile and was making up ground at the close. SWAGGERSTICK began tiring after going six furlongs. JILTED could not menace at any stage. The others were held safe.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:08. Off at 4:11½. Winner Mrs. K. Newman's b. m. (7), by Catalan—Medlor. Trained by R. Weeks. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 2-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:42 2-5, 1:49 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS CATALAN, $7.00 $3.60, $2.80; OGLE, $6.40, $4.00; APATHY, $3.20.

MISS CATALAN, shuffled back soon after the start, worked her way up on the outside, drove into contention when nearing the home stretch, came to the outside to displace OGLE and drew out smartly. OGLE had much speed early to set a steady pace, saved ground, but could not keep pace with the winner when challenged. APATHY raced under strong urging for a little trip and she tired in the last half-mile. PUKKA HEAVEN went well for six furlongs, then tired. NEVER IDOL was squeezed back when the break came, then had too much taken out of her to reach contention. COUNT ADRIN stopped.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:38½. Winner, A. C. Reid's ch. g. (4), by Apex—Sareena. Trained by J. Brooks. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time 0:24 3-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:16 3-5, 1:42 2-5, 1:56 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLAIN ACE $15.00, $7.60, $3.60; ST. CHRISTOPHER, $5.60, $3.20; BROWN WREN, $2.40.

PLAIN ACE, hurried to the front at once, was steadied for the first six furlongs, was shaken up in the last half-mile and drew out steadily. ST. CHRISTOPHER raced in nearest pursuit of the winner from the beginning, but tired and barely lasted to withstand BROWN WREN. Latter was in the first flight and came determinedly in the closing drive. BUNGY was unable to threaten when hard urged. THIS PLAY broke well, but could not gain a contending position at any stage. ON TRIAL was never a factor.

Max Schmeling In U. S.; Seeks Title Bout

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Heavyweight champions, past and present, took over the big town today and momentarily stole the spotlight from the impending scuffle between Joe Louis and concrete-jawed Paulino Uzcudun.

With his trainer, Max Machon, Schmeling is here primarily to see the Louis-Uzcudun fight, and sign a new contract with Joe Jacobs, his manager. He will return to Germany December 15.

Braddock and his pilot, Joe Gould, who cut short an exhibition tour of the Far West a few days ago, will be around until after the holidays.

Schmeling talked business with Mike Jacobs, head of the Twentieth Century Club, this afternoon and also expects to see the Garden authorities within a few days. Jacobs offered Max a bout with Louis next June with the lure of a million-dollar gate. The German said he would rather meet Braddock, but if it couldn't be arranged he would tangle with the Detroit Negro.

"It's the title I want, not the money," he said when told he probably would draw twice as much with Louis as with the champion. "I don't need money so badly, but I could use the title again. The fact that I believe I can beat Braddock makes me want it all the more."

He thinks he can trim Louis, too. He saw pictures of the Negro's fight with Max Baer and says Louis' fighting style—standing up and punching—is right down his alley. "I am better against that type than against the crouching, weaving fellows like Dempsey," he explained.

Max promised that if he fights and beats Braddock he will defend the title in the United States.

The German's first piece of business was to nail reports he would turn his American affairs over to Pete Reilly, manager of Freddie Miller, N. B. A. featherweight champion, thus throwing the redoubtable Joe Jacobs, whose contract expired yesterday, out in the cold.

"Joe here has always been my manager and still is," said Schmeling as the beaming "Yussell the Mussel" excitedly nudged reporters. "We'll get together on a new contract before I leave."

While Max assured Jacobs of a merry Christmas, he did not add to the sum of Paulino's happiness. He can't see anything but a licking for the Bounding Basque. He fought the Spaniard last summer and while he says Paulino can't be knocked out with brass knuckles, he is too easily cut for a puncher like Louis.

Szabo and Browning To Feature Mat Card

Sandor Szabo, Hungarian wrestling champion, will return to Washington after an absence of more match grips and groans with Jim Browning, former world titleholder, in the finish feature of Promoter Joe Turner's weekly show at the Turner Arena, it was announced last night.

kicking, blocking and tackling, in addition to ball-carrying and passing. The sturdy boy from Dubuque has has rounded out three seasons of play during which he gained more than a mile from scrimmage, completed 51 out of 148 passes, averaged 37.4 yards at punting, scored 22 touchdowns, booted 20 extra points and otherwise managed almost single-handed to lift a Chicago team with limited manpower out of the Big Ten ruck.

Injury Hampers Pilney.

The somewhat limited supply of first-class ends or guards of all-America calibre this year has been more than offset by the development of a superb crop of tackles, a flock of excellent centers and a flashing array of backs. Injuries cut short the all-America chances of one of the year's best all-around backfield men, Andy James Pilney of Notre Dame. Pilney set the stage for the memorable last-period triumph of the Fighting

Gallico

Figures Out Pride Reason Schmeling Wants Title Back.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—A sport scene familiar to the New Yorsk sports reporters is the suite at the end of the hall at the Commodore when Herr Max Schmeling, the No. 1 prize fighter of Germany and once heavyweight champion of the world, comes to town. It never changes. It only mellows. Schmeling's hair recedes to resemble Paolino a little. Joe Jacobs gets a little grayer and a little paunchier. Max Machon, Schmeling's Man Friday, never changes and never ages. Time really seems to stand still when Schmeling comes to town. The only thing missing from his room this afternoon were a couple of German bike riders, and Otto Weinman, his German chef. And the bike riders would have been there if they hadn't been busy at the Garden, and Otto is going to Palm Beach or Miami to be head chef for some swanky joint.

There is always the table loaded with soda water and ginger ale bottles, a bowl of ice, glasses and a couple of bottles of whisky. There is always Schmeling on the same couch in the corner over by the window, with a reporter on each side of him. And there is always a handful of unidentified parties who sit around and listen.

Schmeling is now 29. He is bigger and more rugged than he used to be, and his face shows the effects of his profession. There is scar tissue in his bushy black brows and his features are heavier. His English is about the same and he is still careful to draw the fine distinction between the gross and the net.

THAT is one of the first things he learned in this country, which makes him a pretty smart guy. He will only do business on the gross, having discovered early in life that if there is any funny business it usually occurs while they are changing the gross to the net.

Herr Schmeling was most evasive about the purpose of his quick visit to these friendly shores, and suggested that it was possibly merely a social visit to the reporters without a glimpse of whose bright and shining faces he found himself unable to face another year on his German estates. This was the cause of considerable innocent merriment. It also developed during the course of the conversation that Herr Schmeling had been a trifle too cautious and mistrustful in his negotiations with the Hearst people this summer. It seemed fairly obvious from the line of talk that had Herr Schmeling been able to see that a Louis fight would gross just short of $1,000,000, as the Baer fight did, he and not Baer would have been in there boxing Louis.

A Louis-Schmeling fight seems to be in the making now, since it is fairly obvious that the local boxing fathers will not permit anyone to fight James J. Braddock who has not first disposed of Joe Louis (which seems reasonable enough), and Herr Schmeling is really here to take himself a look at our Joseph Louis Barrow in action.

HERR SCHMELING is one of the cagiest of all prize fighters and in cunning deserves to rank with James Joseph Tunney. Tunney never took a motion picture's word when he could get a peek at the flesh. Herr Schmeling opined that there was no information for prospective opponents in the movies of the Baer-Louis fight, since there was only one man fighting.

Duel of Rival Grid Stars Is Seen

By John R. Vosburgh.

A Staff Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Dec. 6.—Devitt Prep's small but select football squad, its praises sung widely here by Richmond papers, arrived at the Old Dominion capital late this afternoon for its game with Fork Union Military Academy's Prep School champions of Virginia, tomorrow at the University of Richmond Stadium.

The game is being mentioned in conspicuous fashion on local sports pages as the "Little Tobacco Bowl Classic' 'of the American Legion. The Legion is sponsoring the game.

A three-hour bus ride from Washington brought no relief to the thoroughly chilled Devitt players upon arrival. Coach Jim McNamara ordered the Richmond Stadium to be made the first stop and then proceeded to run the boy through a brisk signal drill and punting and passing session. The players hustled into uniform for the brief workout.

On All-State Eleven.

Headlines in an evening paper greeted the Deviteers with announcement that four of the team to be met tomorow have been picked on the Virginia All-State Prep eleven. Phil Demuro, hailed as one of the finest backs turned out by a Virginia school in the past decade, was named at quarterback; Wilson Cropp, at end; 228-pound Carleton Russell, at tackle, and Chester Weilgolinski at guard.

The all-star material of their opponents has little feazed the confident crew from Washington, however. Although Fork Union, unbeaten by a prep school all season, will enter the game a rather marked favorite to win, nobody in the Devitt camp appears to be particularly troubled about it.

The Devitt line will go into action considerably strengthened by its new tackle, 190-pound Joe Skomorack, of Worcester, Mass. McNamera is starting the newcomer in place of Jim Ham Lewis, of Indiana, regular tackle all season.

Rivals Apprehensive.

Fork Union is described as apprehensive concerning the promised presence of Adam Zinkievich, Devitt's great triple-threat star. The big, blond Pole was lifting punts high and wide and passing in bullet-like fashion during the workout. But his dazzling ball-carrying technique promises even greater annoyance to the champs of the Old Dominion.

A brilliant individual duel is indicated, with Demuro sporting the colors of the Cadets and Zinkievich due to run more or less wild for the little Washington school. Bill Cleveland, the Rockville, Md., boy who never played football before this year, will start at left half; Francis Nugent, the former St. John's Prep back, at the other half, and Len Askin, brainy Washington boy, at quarter for Devitt.

Curley to Sullivan to Scribe Comes Yarn of India Wrestling

By Bill McCormick.

IN one of the season's best triple plays, a pretty good story was tossed from Jack Curley to Ed Sullivan to Bill McCormick. The story concerned wrestling.

Sullivan, with his uncanny knack of obtaining veracious stories, not only told us a perfectly incredibtable tale, but he made us believe it, made us believe wrestling was on the level in India—and that the whole business was gospel truth.

It seems that Ed, playing in Washington this week at Loew's Fox Theater, apparently knows everybody and everything. One day he met up with Curley, the wrestling impresario.

"The best wrestling I ever saw was in India," averred M. Curley. "Those guys over there are supermen—and wrestlin' is on the level in their country."

"Poof, tish, tush," or words to that effect, answered Mr. Sullivan, always the blase Broadway columnist at heart.

"'Sa fact," maintained Mons. Curley. "Those guys get fabulously rich, too."

"Two poofs, four tishes and a half-dozen tushes," snapped back Mr. Sullivan. "No rasslers are rich—not while there are Jack Curleys to take big cuts on them."

"That's the funny part," answered Mons. Curley. "In India those rasslers not only don't have to give up a cut to the business office, they become independently wealthy as the results of presents given them by the maharajahs."

"In India wrestlers are bred, just as prize cattle are bred in this country. The strongest son of the strongest wrestler is mated with the biggest and strongest woman in the province. Their offspring is chosen to represent his maharajah in competition, and the maharajah rewards success very liberally with diamonds, emeralds and gold."

Once upon a time Mr. Curley and a troupe of the better wrestlers from this country were touring in India. At various points they saw large posters proclaiming the wrestling tournament of the maharajahs, with Arabian Nights' prizes. Mons. Curley and his troupe decided to take advantage of the golden opportunity offered.

"Let's enter this thing under assumed names," agreed the wrestlers. "If we go in under our own names, these guys'll recognize us and throw us out."

Stanislaus Zbyszko, youngest of the Zbyszko brothers, who was a member of the troupe, was elected to be the first man to oppose the Indians. Stan entered the ring without seeing his opponent. As he entered, the sound of tom-toms filled the air—a parting tribute to the wrestler who was to oppose him.

Zbyszko's opponent weighed no less than 350 pounds, but, undaunted, Stan dove head first into his midsection, hoping to get a headlock. The Indian opponent grabbed Stanislaus in one hand, raised him high over his head and slammed him to the ground with a terrific thud.

Stanislaus was unconscious for a long period of time—and the other "ringers" of the American troupe deemed it time to withdraw.

Mons. Curley, one of the better showmen in this country, has tried time and time again to get some of those Indian wrestlers to show here. He cannot succeed because they insist on bringing their entire retinues, consisting of 14 or 15 priests, doctors, trainers and wives with them. Not only that but they insist on riding to a match on elephants, which is quite an expense outside of India.

That is the story. I have it straight from Mr. Sullivan who has it straight from Mr. Curley.

Lead Rival Factions in U. S. Olympic Vote

tion, in the event of a hands-off attitude by the A. A. U.

"This merely means that the A. A. U., no matter what its policy or attitude toward the Olympics may be as an organization, will not attempt to deprive an individual athlete of his rights, so long as he is in good amateur standing," said Mahoney.

If the A. A. U. decides to boycott the Olympics, its representatives will promptly seek to have the American Olympic committee withdraw from the Berlin games. Brundage has called a meeting of the A. O. C. for Sunday afternoon, following the close of the A. A. U. convention.

The resolution debated today by the A. A. U.'s executive committee not only calls for nonparticipation, after reciting Germany's alleged violations of the Olympic code and charging discrimination against Catholics as well as Jews, but urges a general boycott of the Olympics by the United States and requests the International Olympic committee to consider removing the games from Germany altogether.

Cardinal Grid Players Won't 'Double in Brass'

Catholic University football players who are striving for berths on the boxing and basketball teams yesterday were cautioned to take it easy by Head Coach Dutch Bergman. With his star end, George Mulligan, confined to the infirmary with a touch of grippe, Bergman decided to take the precaution of issuing instructions to the players to guard against injuries. The team will resume practice Monday in preparation for its game in the Orange Bowl New Year's Day.

Omaha Is Resting On Farm at Bowie

By the Associated Press.

Bowie, Md., Dec. 6.—Omaha, William Woodward's champion 3-year-old, which won the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes of 1935, is resting on Woodward's Belair farm here, but will be shipped about the first of the year.

Officials of the farm said it had not been decided definitely yet where he will be shipped. It has been reported, however, that he will be sent to Aqueduct for training.

From there, if his condition is reported good, it is understood Omaha will be shipped to England for a try at the 1936 Ascot Gold Cup title. Capt. Cecil Boyd-Rochfort, Woodward's English trainer, is to come to America to pass on the horse's condition.

McNamera Off For Vote on Olympics

By a Staff Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 6.—A long-distance telephone call from the Amateur Athletic Union in New York tonight called James E. McNamera, official delegate of the District of Columbia A. A. U., to the metropolis to vote on the question of this country's participating in the 1936 Olympic games.

McNamera, who is here as coach of the Devitt Prep football team, left immediately by train. Before leaving he said he would vote against America's participating in the Olympics. Two other Washington delegates, James Sullivan and Ed Rosenblum, also will vote against participating, McNamera said.

The well known Washington sports figure added, however, he did not know how William E. Russell, president of the District A. A. U. and Winfree Johnson, both of whom are delegates, would vote.

Bethesda Quintet To Play 23 Games

Busily engaged in smoothing out the rough spots exhibited in an unexpected early season defeat at the hands of Roosevelt High, Coach Tony Kupka and ten Bethesda-Chevy Chase High courtmen, realize they are on the spot in attempting to equal last year's brilliant record with only two of the regulars back in school.

Rated as the best club to represent the Montgomery County school, the 1934-35 team won the county crown, was a finalist in the Metropolitan tourney and semi-finalist in the Washington and Lee U. tournament. To equal or surpass this record rests largely upon the shoulders of Frank Lozupone and Ray Harris, remaining vets, and Woody Putman, the 200-pound, 6 foot 2, former sub guard.

Completing the quartet will be Larry Snyder, 5 foot 9 center, and Ray Stone, forward. The team is built around Lozupone whose work in the Roosevelt game was outstanding.

The schedule:

December 11, Gaithersburg at home; 12, Eastern at Eastern; 17, Gaithersburg at Gaithersburg; 19, Western at home; 20, Alumni at home.

January 3, Eastern at home; 6, Roosevelt at home; 8 Frederick at Frederick; 10, St. Johns at St. Johns; 13, Washington and Lee at Ballston; 16, Maryland Frosh at College Park; 21, Montgomery Blair at Silver Spring; 23, Gonzaga at Gonzaga; 24, Georgetown Prep at home; 30, Landon at home.

February 3, Gonzaga at home; 6, Washington and Lee at home; 12, Western at Western; 14, Frederick at home; 18, St. Johns at home; 19, Landon at Kensington; 21, Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park.

Women Begin Pin Tourney Tonight

THE eighth annual Meyer Davis Sweepstakes, held exclusively for women bowlers of the District, opens at the Lucky Strike alleys tonight, attracting a large field of the city's foremost duckpinnists, instead of the usual nine games split into three blocks, this season's classic will be a ten-game series, with the latter five games being rolled on the same drives on Saturday, December 14.

Lorraine Gulli, for three consecutive years the winner and five times the titlist, is the defending champion, having topped Billie Butler with a total of 1,071, three pins under the record of the event.

Major league bowling again tops the local duckpin calendar tonight with Hugh Waldrop's national champion Dixie Pigs entertaining the Coca Cola Cavaliers, of Richmond, Va., at the Temple alleys. Joe Freschi, Dixie sweepstakes champion, who has been burning the maples in three leagues at a 130 clip, will be out to regain the individual average leadership which he lost to Meyer Jacobson, of Baltimore, and Astor Clarke.

The Occidental Restaurant, the other local entry, who went to the front in the District League this week, will journey to Richmond to tackle the John Marshall Statesmen.

Abe Beavers, of Miscellaneous No. 1, collected a 388 set to aid his team in winning game and set laurels in the Navy Yard League at Lucky Strike. Ross, of Miscellaneous No. 2, annexed high individual game with 142.

G. W., West Virginia To Meet Here Nov. 26

Washington's 1936 Thanksgiving Day football attraction will be supplied by West Virginia and George Washington, according to a schedule released last night by the Mountaineers. The game is scheduled November 26 at Griffith Stadium.

Police B. C. Dares N. E.

An emphatic challenge to the Northeast Boys Club football team for the 150-pound championship of the city has been issued by the Metropolitan Police Boys Club team of that class. Morris Fox, assistant athletic director of the Police Boys Club, threw down the gauntlet over the telephone yesterday. His team has won six games and lost one. The Northeast team has won seven straight against no defeats.

Shoot Postponed.

Because of the death of Charles S. Wilson, for years president of the old Analostan Gun Club and of its successor, the Washington Gun Club, the regular weekly Saturday shoot will be discontinued until December 14.

Roosevelt Five Rallies, Wins By 18-17

Coakley's Foul Goal in Last Minute Beats Blair Quintet.

WITH the score tied at 17-all and five seconds to play, Francis Coakely, of Roosevelt High, shot a foul goal—his first point of the day—to give the Rough Riders an uphill 18-to-17 victory over Montgomery Blair High of Silver Spring on the winners' court yesterday.

It was the second consecutive victory of the year for Coach Herman Littman's five over a Montgomery County school and was effectual only after a one-man rally on the part of Spiro Kolius, Roosevelt star who had personally brought them to a tie score at the end of the third quarter after trailing, 6 to 13.

The winners started auspiciously enough, garnering a 4-to-1 lead before the game was two minutes old, but the visitors took things in their own hands for the remainder of the quarter and led, 7 to 4, at the first intermission.

Blair Leads, 9 to 6.

Single baskets by Thompson and Shorb was all the scoring in the second period, with Blair ahead, 9 to 6. Stewart Burger, of the Springers, ran the score to 13 to 6 in the next quarter before Kolius found his eye and tied the score at 14-all.

The last quarter was a ding-dong defensive battle. Roosevelt assumed the lead for the second time in the game with a snowbird by Silverman, but Shorb tied it with a pair of foul shots. Dietle put the suburbanites ahead with a foul shot, but it was called back because he stepped over the line. Shorb then made his third shot in a row from the penalty stripe to overtake the hosts, but Kolius came back in the spotlight to tie the game with a minute to play.

Fighting hard in the closing seconds, Wallie Robertson tried a little too hard and fouled Coakley in the act of shooting. He missed the first one, but sent the 300 onlookers into an uproar as the second shot dropped in as the timer's gun sounded the end of the game.

Mitchell Is Out Of Godwin Fight

Terry Mitchell, New York heavyweight who was to have battled Bob Godwin, of Herald Harbor, in the feature bout at Joe Turner's Arena next Monday night, was forced to withdraw last night because of a severe cold. Running a fever of 104, Mitchell was ordered to bed by his physician.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is frantically seeking a suitable substitute for Mitchell, casting out lines for Bob Pastor, Lou Barba, Dan Hassett, Al Delaney or Joe Lipps.

Idle since last December when his jaw was fractured by Red Journee, Bob Lowry, the crowd-pleasing middleweight, will return to the wars in a six-round preliminary to the Monday night feature, whatever it turns out to be.

Lowry's opponent will be Mike Sciplo, of Baltimore.

By Dave Herman.

"THERE may never be another Jones or Hagen."

The speaker was none other than Gene Sarazen, Connecticut's gentleman-farmer, who spent a few hours in Washington yesterday en route to Florida for some sunshine and golf.

"Little's a great golfer, but he's not in the class with Jones or Hagen, and I doubt if he will reach the heights these fellows have," the bronzed, stocky Italian star said between puffs on a stogie.

He continued:

"The stars are fading, new ones are twinkling, but not for long. The new crop of professionals and amateurs is good, but there isn't one in the bunch that bears the earmarks of a Jones or Hagen.

"Unless a golfer crashes through in a big championship at an early age—say 18, 19 or 20—he never will attain stardom. You know that Jones started when he was a youngster, and Hagen was just out of the caddy ranks when he took the Open back in 1914. As for myself, I was a cocky kid of 19 when I won the 1922 Open at Skokie.

"You wouldn't call Sam Parks a great golfer because he won the Open at Oakmont this year—would you?"

Sarazen explained that fellows such as Johnny Revolta, winner of the National P. G. A.; Paul Runyan, one of the best in the business; Henry Picard, leading money winner of the 1934-35 season, hit their strides after they had passed what he terms the "tender golf age."

"They win a tournament here, and a tournament there, but they lack the stuff in the big pinch," Sarazen declared.

The former British and American Open champion said that until Little wins an open—"and he may never"—he can not be called a "Jones." "I'll make it stronger than that," Sarazen added. "Until he duplicates Bobby's 'Grand Slam.'" . . .

Golf now is secondary in Sarazen's life, he explained. He said his main interest was his farm in Brookfield Center, Conn., near Bridgeport. Recently he bought another farm, and now he has something like 165 acres.

Sarazen said that he hadn't swung a golf club since the P. G. A. at Oklahoma, but was content as long as he could raise his cows, work the tractor on his farm and barter with the good folk of the village.

"I expect to win a few more open championships before I retire from this game—and when I do retire, I'm going to make money out of my farm."

Sarazen will spend a few days in Pinehurst, N. C., trying out some new golf clubs. He has two bag loads of 'em. Then to the West Coast of Miami to take up residence in the palatial mansion of his friend, Tom Meighan, the movie actor, who has turned over the key to Sarazen and the missus. He will play in only a few tournaments—the $10,000 Miami Biltmore, the Bobby Jones Masters, which he won last year; the British and American Open and the P. G. A. After that he will take a trip to Australia.

Aggies Primed, Seek to Stop Mustangs

Hope to Give Bowl-Bound Methodists Busy Day, Coach Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Dec. 6.—The texas A. and M. College football team was pronounced ready tonight for a determined attempt to upset Southern Methodist University here tomorrow.

"It would be a feather in our helmet to knock off the Rose Bowl-bound Mustangs," said Coach Homer Norton, of the Aggies. "Of course, that's going to be a tremendous job, but my boys have worked themselves into a lather over the game.

"With any kind of good breaks, we'll give Southern Methodist a busy afternoon, rain or shine."

The game brings to an end the colorful Southwest Conference title race. S. M. U. needs only a tie to win the championship. But the Methodists desire more—they want to sweep into California's Rose Bowl January 1 and against Stanford with an unblemished record. Therefore, they'll give everything in an effort to whip the Aggies.

A. and M., on the other hand, needs a win or tie to avoid finishing in a cellar deadlock with University of Texas.

SEC Refuses to Give Meehan Hearing in N.Y.

By the Associated Press.

Michael J. Meehan, veteran Wall street operator yesterday was denied a transfer from Washington to New York of hearings on charges of illegal stock market manipulation, made by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Besides rejecting the request for a change of venue, the commission also refused Meehan's plea for an enlarged bill of particulars specifying in detail the commission charges against him.

The commission has alleged that Meehan drove the price of Bellanca Aircraft Corporation stock from about $1.50 up to $5.50 by matching orders. This means, generally, that a trader buys and sells stock to himself in order to create an appearance of activity.

Proof of the charges might lead to Meehan's explusion from the New York Stock and Curb exchanges and the Chicago Board of Trade.

In denying the motions, the commission said it would not change the venue because the importance of the case necessitated that the commission itself attend many of the hearings so as to pass on motions and otherwise to maintain "close supervision at all stages."

The commision asserted that its bill of particulars gave all the detail required by the act and cited numerous authorities in support of this opinion.

The hearing will be held in Washington next Wednesday at 10 a. m. in the commission's headquarters.

District Share Of 1936 Deficit Is $43,000,000

New York's Burden Will Be Heaviest, Nevada's the Least.

New York, Dec. 6.—The share of District of Columbia in the prospective $10,000,000,000 New Deal deficit will be approximately $43,000,000, according to an estimate by George Buchan Robinson, in the Annalist today.

The heaviest burden will fall on the State of New York ($1,233,000,000), with Pennsylvania ($843,000,000), Illinois ($713,000,000), Ohio ($569,000,000), California ($568,000,000), and Texas ($409,000,000) following in the order named. At the other end of the list is Nevada ($14,000,000), while Delaware ($20,000,000), Wyoming ($25,000,000), New Mexico ($28,000,000) and Vermont ($29,000,000) are next in line.

The estimates are included in tables giving the amounts for each State, as well as by counties for New York. They have been arrived at in a manner similar to that of the quotas used in the wartime Liberty Bond campaigns, and are based on population and taxable wealth, the latter being given double weight.

If the total national debt burden is placed at the $30,000,000,000 that it is expected to reach by December 15, the figures multiplied by 3 indicate the total Federal debt burden of each State, while a national debt of some $55,000,000,000 to $70,000,000,000, referred to by the President in his November 29 speech at Atlanta as not unduly overstraining the national credit, would raise these amounts 5½ to 7 times.

$50,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 273-day bills and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks, or branches, up to 2 p. m., Monday, December 9. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

United Air Lines Set Express Record

Bulls and Bears Deadlocked In Market Which Holds Firm

By Frank MacMillen,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, Dec. 6.—The stock market stepped back half a pace today in even-tempered trading. How completely the efforts of bulls and bears offset one another was illustrated by the fact that out of 731 issues, gains outnumbered losses by only 15. At the same time shares in the unchanged column numbered 189, compared with 168 the day before.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down .1 of a point to 55.2. Transactions totaled 2,424,710, compared with 2,377,770 on Thursday.

Brokers said the same influences were at work as in recent sessions; uncertainty over foreign affairs counterbalanced by domestic trade and industrial improvement.

An abrupt reversal in the trend of the French franc, which has long declined gradually, was attributed in financial circles to Paris reports that chances had improved for a political truce between warring factions.

Although the generally favorable tone of business news did not serve to boost run-of-the-mill stocks, it provided a background for a brisk demand for oils, specialties and a handful of low-priced equities.

Oils Work Higher.

Limited gains were turned in by Continental Oil at 29¾, Pure Oil at 14½, Socony-Vacuum at 13⅝ and Standard of California at 38⅛.

Concentrated buying in this sector was explained in most brokerage quarters by the opinion that the group has not kept pace with the rest of the market.

Buying in a few of the coppers was done to the tune of Wall Street talk of possible favorable dividend action ahead for some of them. Late profit taking held sway, however, and fractional losses were suffered by Anaconda at 27½, Cerro de Pasco at 63½ and Kennecott at 29⅛.

Chrysler and General Motors found the going hard and both closed with a loss of more than a point at 82½ and 54⅜, respectively. Meanwhile, the market's focus shifted to the shares of Packard which closed up ⅜ at 7 on heavy turnover.

Fractional advances were made by American Telephone at 159¼, Allied Chemical at 161½ and International Harvester at 62. General Electric at 37⅞, U. S. Steel at 47½ and Westinghouse at 92½ were slightly lower.

Small amounts were chipped from the prices of most rails, in spite of the fact that car loadings reported for the week ended November 30 were down less than seasonally. Santa Fe at 57¼, Baltimore & Ohio at 17⅛ and New York Central at 28⅛ were among the losers.

Freight Higher for Year.

The loadings total as reported by the Association of American Railroads stood at 570,427 cars, a decline of 76,076 from the previous week and a gain of 82,242 over the like week a year ago. The figures were about in line with preliminary estimates of analysts.

The Dun & Bradstreet report that the quickening of the retail trade pace was at the fastest clip in six months was liked in market quarters. It came as no surprise to the numerous traders who have been accumulating merchandise shares for some time past on expectations of a good Christmas trade. Sales gains were put at from 5 to 15 per cent over a year ago by the agency.

The swelling of bank money, as shown by the weekly Federal Reserve report came in for more than usual comment owing to the fact the country's gold stock had shot above the $10,000,000,000 mark for the first time.

The gold hoist was seen as instrumental in the new peak attained by excess member banks reserves at $3,180,000,000. Some of these surplus funds, bankers said today, might possibly find their way into the stock market over a longer period.

Wheat finished unchanged to ½ cent a bushel higher. Corn rose ⅛ to ⅜ of a cent. Cotton was strong.

In the foreign exchange market the French franc was up .02½ of a cent to 6.60¾. The pound sterling was off ⅛ of a cent to $4.92½.

Acme Steel Declares Extra 25c Dividend

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP).—Directors of the Acme Steel Co. have declared an extra dividend of 25 cents per share in addition to the quarterly of 62½ cents, it was announced today. The dividends are payable January 2 to stockholders of record December 16.

Winnipeg Selling Checks Wheat Rise

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 6.—Indications of Canadian government selling of wheat futures at Winnipeg acted as more or less of a wet blanket on North American grain prices today. Despite the fact that the Liverpool wheat market closed as much as 2 cents a bushel higher in some cases, Chicago wheat values made only a laggard response.

Wheat in Chicago closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to ½ cent higher; May, 95⅝-½; corn, ⅛-1⅜ up; May, 59¼; oats, unchanged to ⅛ advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2 cents.

Midwest Trade Picks Up With Spirited Spurt

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 6.—Substantial spurts in many lines of business spangled a fresh series of pre-Christmas reports today. One of Chicago's big mail-order houses—usually the first actually to handle Yuletide cash—announced the best November sales in history. Wholesale and retail trade spurted. From Ohio came statements of big employment and pay roll gains.

Montgomery Ward & Co. reported November sales totaled $30,910,462 to surpass any other November in the firm's annals. Sewell Avery, president, described the gain as "seasonable" though "pleasing," and attributed a due proportion of the increase to better conditions in the farm belt.

Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., said the week's advance in retail sales ranged from 8 to 20 per cent over the previous week, averaged 5 to 15 per cent over 1934 and was one of the widest gains in nearly six months. It found wholesale orders from Christmas merchandise in several categories exceeded those of last year by 20 to 25 per cent.

Expansion in Cleveland.

Cleveland Chamber of Commerce spokesmen estimated $25,000,000 in wages would be paid to factory employes in December, compared with $16,000,000 last December. A 42 per cent gain in employment over the same week in 1934 was reported in a Merchants and Manufacturers Association survey among 51 Toledo concerns. The Chamber of Commerce at Canton claimed employment there had scaled to 92 per cent of the all-time peak in 1929. Youngstown anticipated a surge in steel production to 62 per cent of capacity next week. Northern Ohio concerns reckoned they would pay out $4,000,000 in dividends for the holidays.

The Chicago Association of Commerce had statistics in hand indicating Americans had $5,000,000,000 more spending money this year than last, and that the Nation's merchants had engaged more than 250,000 extra hands for the Yuletide rush.

Spiegel-May-Stern Co., Chicago mail-order house, announced net sales for November were $3,642,294, a 9.4 increase over the previous November.

Club Names Committee.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 6.—Former Gov. Westmoreland Davis, president of the local Roosevelt-for-President Club, has announced the appointment of an executive committee for the county as follows: Leesburg District, John F. Kincaid; Mount Gilead, Howard C. Rogers; Lovettsville, Jack Potterfield; Jefferson, R. J. McCray, and Broad Run, P. J. Coleman.

Leesburg Estate Sold.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 6.—Miss Dorothy Franks, of Toronto, Canada, has purchased the Joseph VanDevanter property 4 miles west of Leesburg. The property joins the summer residence of Dr. Charles Stanley White, Washington surgeon. Seventy-two acres are in the tract, on which the late Dr. Joseph VanDevanter erected a Colonial style house about 30 years ago.

On The Air Today

IF YOU'RE interested in knowing what the country at large thinks of the re-election prospects of President Roosevelt in 1936, or what the United States as a whole thinks of governmental expenditures for relief—or numerous other vital national problems, you'll be interested, too, in hearing Dr. George Gallup tonight, WRC, at 7:30.

Dr. Gallup is managing director of the American Institute of Public Affairs. It is his organization that polls the country on these national issues and provides the cross-sections of opinion through "America Speaks," published each Sunday in The Post.

Tonight he'll tell exactly how the public pulse is scientifically felt, and why he believes he will be able to forecast, for example, the trend of the 1936 campaigns. To be informed, read "America Speaks" each Sunday. And to understand thoroughly how the figures are obtained with amazing accuracy, hear Dr. Gallup tonight at WRC.

Wallace Beery set a limt of 12 appearances in the "Chateau" Saturday night shows — and consequently bows out on December 28. Of interest, however, is the return of Al Jolson as of January 4.

When Jolson left the "Chateau" series last October (the reason being that his time would be entirely taken up in picture making) a tongue-in-the-cheek attitude was taken by many close to broadcasting. It was observed that no less a prolific maker of flickers than Dick Powell continued month in and out with his weekly "Hollywood Hotel." No air vacations for pictures.

Similarly, pictures have not interfered with the air work of Jack Benny. Rudy Vallee and other radio personalities. It should be noted, on the other hand, that Fred Allen took a vacation form the airways last summer to make a picture. And occasionally other stars of screen and radio have dropped one temporarily to favor the other.

But a strong feeling prevailed that Jolson might not be back. That can be checked off now. He's going to be right back at the old stand as before.

According to the gentleman who handles Singin' Sam's publicity, the Hoosier air basso is scheduled to appear in Washington December 16. The publicity gentleman says he'll "do his stuff from the studio owned by a large drug store chain." Well, he can't fool us. Sam's going to sing in Arch McDonald's "goldfish bowl" over at the Peoples studio on G street.

The bosses of the Intercity net are chuckling over the announcement that "March of Time" will revert to a once-a-week news dramatization, on the old half-hour basis, in the near future. They're amused because they have been presenting "Five Star Final" for more than four years, five or six times weekly—making the feature the oldest daily news dramatization in radio. "Five Star Final" is produced by Phillip Barrison, dramatic director of New York's WMCA, key station of the Intercity net. WOL presents the feature locally, Monday's through Fridays, on a quarter-hour basis and Sundays for half an hour.

• • • •

Speaking of WOL, a birthday celebration is scheduled for next Tuesday when WOL reaches the ripe and honorable old age of 11 years. One feature for the occasion stands out prominently—the announcers are to have their own way all day long. They will do what they wish, say what they care to and conduct themselves generally to suit themselves. My, my, what a golden opportunity! For one 18-hour broadcasting day the public should be able to hear programs presented without the usual studio inhibitions and triteness.

Culbertson on Bridge

No Compass Necessary.

In other articles I have referred to "optical illusion" on the part of declarer. There are several different manifestations of this failing, but none is more inexplicable than this situation: Declarer sits South, and with the North hand as dummy is unable to make his contract. But if he moves around the table, picks up the North hand and South becomes exposed (the difference in the opening lead having no bearing) he has no difficulty.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

NORTH
♠ 8 7 5 2
♥ Q 10 9 8
♦ 10 5
♣ A 9 6

WEST
♠ K Q J 6 3
♦ A Q 6 4

EAST
♠ A 10 9 4
♥ 5 4 2
♦ 8 3 2

SOUTH
♠ None
♥ A K J 3
♦ K J 9 7
♣ K Q J 10 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 club	1 spade	2 clubs	Pass
2 spades	Pass	3 clubs	Pass
4 hearts	Pass	5 hearts	Pass
6 hearts (final bid)

On the opening lead of the spade king by West (East also would have opened a spade) the declarer saw two possible lines of play. The diamond finesse against the queen was persuasive, but, on close analysis, not nearly as attractive as another method.

He ruffed the spade with his small trump and led the low club to dummy's nine. A spade was ruffed with the heart ace, a club led to dummy's ace, and a third spade led and ruffed with the heart king. Now the heart jack was overtaken by dummy's queen, and two rounds more drew the opposing trumps, South discarding diamonds. Dummy's club put South in the lead for his three good club tricks, and North's fourth heart accounted for the twelfth trick, the diamond suit never having been touched. In short, declarer made five club tricks, three of his own trumps, and dummy's four trumps separately.

Question: My partner and I were vulnerable and had a 60 part score. I opened the bidding with one spade on the following hand:

Spades A Q J 10 6 2, hearts 9, diamonds A J 10 8, clubs J 5. The opponents never bid. My partner bid three clubs. What should I respond?

Answer: You should respond with four spades. The part score demands that you take more than "passive action," since your partner may have bid his hand to the limit in making his three club bid, and he will be discouraged by a minimum rebid on your part.
